It was a beautiful Saturday morning. With my parents' permission, I walked to the nearby park. After a short walk, I sat down (1) _____ a wooden bench. Not far from me, I saw a boy with a net in his hand. I watched him with curiosity as he caught a colourful butterfly. Later, he took it (2) _____ of the net and began to stick needles into its wings, pinning it onto a heavy cardboard sheet.

How cruel it was to kill a thing of such beauty! After a while, he ran (3) _____ to ride on his bicycle, leaving the cardboard sheet and net on the grass. I walked up to the cardboard sheet and looked at the butterfly that was pinned to it. It was still moving. I decided to free the butterfly so I gently removed the needles one by one. Soon, the butterfly started to flutter its wings. It flew (4) _____ me, as if to thank me for savi- its life. Feeling happy, I watched it land on a flower before disappearing (5) _____ my sight.

Just then, the boy returned. He glared at me. Frightened, I ran away as fast as I could.
