The goblin shark is definitely not a beauty. Luckily, the goblin shark does not need to look pretty since it is found in the ocean depths. A distinctive trait (16) is its long protruding blade-like snout. It also has a pink body which is pretty unusual but, by far, the most bizarre (17) aspect of this shark is its jaw – it has an extendable jaw with sharp teeth. The usefulness of this feature had been a heated discussion (18) among scientists but they agreed that this extendable jaw makes it easier to catch prey.

The average length of a goblin shark is 1.6 metres and the longest recorded length is 3.8 metres. These animals are as slow as tortoises, which can make it hard for them to chase food. Although research suggests that it is not a particularly rare (19) creature, the goblin shark lives mostly in areas which are uninhabited (20). This makes it difficult to track it for long periods of time.

LET'S CYCLE!

An estimated one billion people ride bicycles every day – for transport, recreation and sport. Shouldn't you be a part of them?

Do You Know...?

The first bicycles were completely different and were not as comfortable as now. In 1817, the concept of cycling was invented by Baron Karl von Drais. What he invented wasn't exactly the bicycle which we know and use. It did have a typical bicycle frame and two wheels, but it was propelled by walking as opposed to pedalling.

You just need two to four hours a week to see its benefits.

Cycling is:

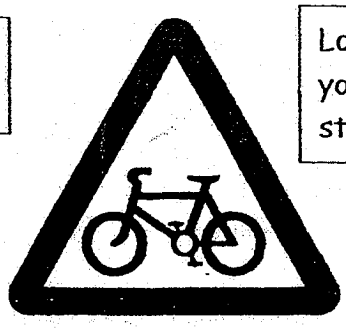

- Low impact – less strain and injuries than most other forms of exercise
- A good muscle workout – uses all of the major muscle groups
- Easy – does not require high levels of physical skill
- Good for strength and stamina – increases stamina, strength and aerobic fitness
- A fun way to get fit – experience the thrill and adventure of going down hills and being outdoors
- Time-efficient – reduces time spent driving motor vehicles or using trains or buses

Before you start, here are some safety tips.

Obey traffic lights and road signs.

Look behind you before you turn, overtake or stop.

Don't cycle next to another person on busy or narrow roads.

Use arm signals before you turn right or left.

Never use a mobile phone while cycling.

Don't use headphones while cycling.

When cycling past parked cars, watch out for car doors opening suddenly and allow room to pass safely.

A good working bicycle is a must. If you are buying a second-hand bicycle or you have an old bicycle that has been gathering dust, consider having it serviced at a bicycle shop to ensure it is roadworthy.
If you are buying a new one, there are plenty of models to choose from. Mountain bikes are the most popular among cyclists. A bicycle specialist can advise you on the correct frame size and help you select a bicycle to suit your budget and the type of cycling you want to do.
For most people, cycling is a safe and effective form of exercise. If you have any health concerns or an existing medical problem, see your doctor before you start.

Some Fun Facts About Bicycles

- About 100 million bicycles are manufactured worldwide each year.
- There are over a half billion bicycles in China today. Bicycles were first brought to China in the late 1800s.
- A bicycle can stay upright without a rider as long as it is moving at 13 kilometres per hour or faster.
- On a bicycle, you can travel three times faster than you can walk using the same amount of energy.

Read this passage and answer questions 71 to 80. (20 marks)

Sean, the son of a police officer, had a Labrador pup called Minnie. Minnie's parents had been excellent police dogs so what more natural that she, too, should be given a trial at the K-9 training school. She seemed healthy and strong, with sturdy legs and a proud, firm head.

It required less than a week, however, to discover that Minnie was not going to make it. She just did not have the right qualities. Obedience, for instance. On the third day, her handler tried teaching Minnie to run and fetch a stuffed bear. She thought it was some kind of joke and instead of bringing it back and dropping it at the handler's feet, she tore it apart. Then she hid it in a bush, knocking down several bean poles along the way. On the fourth day, Minnie was taught to jump through an open window. Instead, she picked a closed one. You could hear the smashing glass for miles. The inspector who was in the office was not amused.

That was the end of Minnie's career as a police dog. With some hesitation, her handler who was Sean's neighbour, suggested that Minnie, though difficult to train, might turn out to be a reasonable house dog and pet. He approached Sean's father and told him about her history. Hesitantly, Sean's father agreed to give her a try. Sean, who had never had a dog before, was delighted. He started his own course of training at once. Sometimes he wondered if his neighbour was all that good as a dog handler. Perhaps he simply had not understood Minnie. She had a mind of her own but she could be obedient in her own way.

Most evenings, Sean took Minnie for walks along the nearby canal. This particular day, late in September, was misty, muddy and damp. As they were walking silently, Sean discovered that Minnie's collar had come off again, somehow. Instinctively, she sped off. The collar could not have come off easily. Sean's father had insisted on it fitting Minnie well as she was big for her age and Sean was small for his. Nevertheless, Minnie had only to tug hard, and Sean had either to let go or take off and fly like a kite on a string.

Normally when Minnie disappeared, she would pick up Sean's footsteps and return to him, but that night she seemed to take ages. Seeing and hearing no evidence of Minnie's whereabouts, Sean tried his familiar canal path. Minnie would turn up eventually, wagging her tail, showing her teeth and oozing black mud which smelled of garbage.

A few minutes later, there she was, at last. She had a remarkable grin on her doggy face. However, she carried an unfamiliar floral scent. Perfume, maybe. Sean did not bother to refit her collar. She followed him closely for a while and then became distracted. Something in the distance had caught her eye. Sensing her uneasiness, Sean gave her some biscuits which he had found in his pocket. He watched her gobble them up and she continued sniffing along the path.

Suddenly, a girl came whizzing by, travelling with incredible speed and skill on a skateboard. There were shopping bags in each hand. Minnie liked little girls, especially if they were moving fast. She bounded after the girl who was thrown off balance. Her shopping bags were flung out of her hands, spilling tea, flour, eggs and bread.

"I'm sorry," said Sean. The girl scowled and snapped, "Leave me alone!" At that moment, when he turned around, he realised that Minnie was nowhere in sight. However, this time, the wait was much longer and futile. She never returned.
