Once, when a lion was sleeping, a little playful mouse ran up the lion's body. The lion felt tickled and woke up. It caught the mouse with its huge paw and opened its big jaws to swallow the mouse.

"I'm sorry!" cried the mouse. "Please let me go. I will not disturb you again. If you let me go, I promise to repay your kindness someday."

The lion felt amused to hear that the mouse would be able to help him. It opened its paw and let the mouse go.

A few days later, some hunters captured the lion. They tied it to a tree. While the hunters were looking for their wagon, the mouse happened to pass by and saw the lion in trouble. It quickly ran up to the lion and chewed away the ropes that tied the lion.
