Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow.

Mr Tim, a farmer, had two puppies for sale. One afternoon, as he put up a few posters outside his farm, he felt a tug on his shirt. It was a young boy.

"Hi Mr Tim! My name is Jack. Can I take a look at the puppies?"

"Sure," said Mr Tim. He blew his whistle. "Here, Terry!" he called.

Jack's eyes danced with delight when he saw Terry, the puppy, running quickly towards the fence. Just then, Jack noticed a small puppy in the farm. In a cautious manner, the timid puppy began to limp towards the fence, doing its best to catch up with Terry.

"I want that one," Jack said, pointing to the puppy. Mr Tim gave Jack a surprised look and said, "That puppy's name is Spotty. It is very shy. I don t think you will want to adopt it. Spotty is not an active puppy and it is not likely to run and play with you like other puppies would."

Jack replied, "I will take care of Spotty." Jack picked Spotty up tenderly and to his surprise, Spotty licked him gleefully. Jack added, "I promise I will give Spotty a nice home and play with it daily. I'm sure I will be able to understand its needs well." Without hesitation, Jack decided to adopt Spotty.

Section G: Comprehension 2 (10 marks)

Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow.

When I was young, my parents did not earn much. They had to save before they could afford to buy groceries, especially meat.

Every time Mr Lee, the butcher, came to our village, he would bring along a basketful of meat on his bicycle to his stall. Everyone would rush to buy whatever pieces of meat he had because once they were sold out, no one knew when they would be available again.

One day, Mrs Ming, our neighbour, told my mother that Mr Lee was coming to our village the following day. I woke up very early the next morning because my mother told me to buy some meat. My brother, Ah Seng, stationed himself at his usual spot to look out for Mr Lee's bicycle. Once Ah Seng saw Mr Lee, he alerted me. With my basket, I then ran quickly across the bridge, passed a temple, and through the field that led straight to his stall at the market. With Ah Seng's help, I was confident that I would reach the stall early. However, when I arrived, my heart sank. A long line of people had already formed. All I could do was to take my place at the back of the queue.

When Mr Lee started selling the meat, the queue cleared quickly. When it was almost my turn, to my dismay, all the meat was sold out. I picked up my empty basket and walked home. My heart was heavy. What should I tell my mother? She would be very disappointed.

As I was nearing home, I felt very worried. When Mrs Ming saw me with an empty basket, she stopped me and gave me some meat. I heaved a sigh of relief. I could not forget her act of kindness and generosity.
