Section C (10 m)

Comprehension

Read the passage below and answer questions 15 to 22 based on the passage.

It was almost midnight when I set off into the forest on Pulau Ubin. A mist covered the area as I joined a local durian-picking group to harvest the fruit.

Thorny bushes scratched my limbs as I followed the group leader deeper into the forest. To ward off mosquitoes, I had sprayed some insect repellent on my clothes. I carried a powerful torch to light my way and wore a helmet to protect my head from any falling fruit.

Suddenly, the group leader stopped and asked us if we had heard a durian fall. I had not. I was more worried about losing my footing on the ground and trying to prevent myself from stamping on the army of ants crawling on my shoes.

Shining a torch, the group leader found a fallen durian. "Squirrels have eaten it as they know how to pick the best ones," he explained. Just then, we noticed the area was littered with rubbish. Plastic bottles and styrofoam boxes had been left behind by people who had camped overnight to wait for the durians to fall.

Finally, I heard the thumping sound of a durian landing on the ground. We shone our torches around eagerly and searched thoroughly but could not find it. Sadly, we had to leave the forest empty-handed.

Mr and Mrs Smith and their ten-year-old daughter, Mary, lived in Malacca. One night, after dinner, Mr Smith announced that he was going to have to stop being a teacher for a while. He had heard that the Japanese were attacking Singapore and wanted to go there to join the British army to strengthen the defence. Concerned about his safety, Mary cried and clung to her father as he bade her farewell the next day.

Life was not the same for Mary after that. When Mary came home from school, her mother no longer sang songs and played games with her. Mary knew that something was wrong, but was too scared to ask because her mother always looked sad and anxious.

One day, Mrs Smith received a letter from Mary's father. He wanted them to leave for Singapore immediately as it was no longer safe to stay in Malacca with the war approaching. At once, Mrs Smith packed a few belongings into a small bag. Mary grabbed a change of clothes and her favourite teddy bear.

Late that night, Mary and her mother were ushered into a large army truck. Even in the darkness, Mary could see that it was full of mothers and their young children. Unlike the other children who looked sleepy and were snuggling up to their mothers, Mary was wide awake. "I can't wait to reunite with Father!" she thought excitedly.

As the truck drove away, Mary did not even turn to look at her house where she had lived for the last ten years. Little did she know that she was never going to return to Malacca again.
