Guilty of corruption, a man was brought before a wise old judge. After much contemplation (16), the judge said, "You may choose your punishment. The first punishment is to pay a fine of a hundred thousand dollars. The second punishment is to accept a hundred lashes across your back. The third punishment is to eat ten kilograms of onions."

Without a second thought (17), the convict decided on the third option. However, barely (18) had he finished one kilogram of onions when he felt his throat constricting (19). Quickly, he begged the judge to allow him to take on the second punishment instead. The judge agreed. After the tenth stroke, the man could no longer bear the pain. "Please spare me the lashing, I will pay the fine!" he cried, regretting his rash decision (20). The judge smiled and granted him his wish.

Study the brochure carefully and then answer questions 21 to 28.

The earth is SERIOUSLY sick!

The Ocean

Large sections of the ocean are overfished. Additionally, each year about 20 to 40 million tons of sea life are caught and thrown back into the ocean – usually wounded or dead. Why? They are caught along with target fish but are not wanted. If this continues, what will it mean for people who depend on the sea as a major source of their food?

Deforestation

The cutting down of trees results in a reduction in the earth's capacity to absorb carbon dioxide, and this is said to be a cause of global warming. Some species of plants, which are used for lifesaving medicine, will soon vanish. Nevertheless, forest destruction continues. In fact, the rate of destruction has increased in recent years. If nothing is done about it, tropical forests could disappear in about twenty years' time.

Littering

Littering both on land and in the sea is a very grave problem. If the waste is toxic, it can cause sickness or death in humans and animals.

There are many more threats to our environment. Can the earth be saved or is the battle already lost? What can you do to save the dying planet?

Support the SAVE THE EARTH WEEK event from 1 to 5 July 2019

Initiated by the Nature Club members, this one-week event has a host of exciting activities lined up just for you!

My EARTH, My HOME poster-design competition
Paint or draw how you can save the environment. Winning entries will be displayed at the exhibition booth. Trophies and attractive prizes will be given away to the top 5 entries! Email the Art teacher-in-charge, Mrs Amy Chia, at amychia@artworks.com.sg for more details.

Read this passage and answer Questions 71 to 80. (20 marks)

When I was eight, I had a gaping hole in one of my molars, the consequence of consuming excessive amount of cakes and sweets, and not practising good dental hygiene. Brushing my teeth was often done within minutes. Unable to afford any expensive treatments, my mother tried all kinds of useless remedies to ease my suffering. One of those was to stuff a small piece of cotton wool moistened with some medicated oil into the cavity on the tooth. It would temporarily numb the pain but the decay and the suffering would continue.

In the end, my mother had no choice but to take me to a quack dentist, operating in one of the shop houses near our home. As far as I could recollect, there were only a few certified dentists then. In any case, we could not afford their treatment. Entering the clinic, we saw a few other patients waiting. All of a sudden, I heard high-pitched drilling sounds coming out from the dental room. That was enough to make me go down on my knees and beg my mother to go home. I promised her that I would not eat any more sweets. Unfortunately, my mother had a heart of stone.

Soon, my name was called. I dragged my feet into the room. It was sparsely furnished, with a dental chair and bottles of anaesthetic lining the shelves. The pungent smell from antibacterial soap wafted into my nose. A stern-looking nurse ordered me to sit on the dental chair. After a casual glance at the cavity, the dentist was all set to do the job. The tools lined up beside the dental chair looked intimidating. My worst nightmare was about to begin. To start with, the dentist applied some anaesthetic gel on my gum. With my mouth wide open, he began to screen the area around the decayed tooth. The nurse placed a long pair of pliers into his outstretched hand. I almost passed out at the sight of it. Then, gripping the instrument, he began to yank it out forcefully. For some strange reason, my tooth seemed to have a mind of its own and refused to budge. He tried again and again without success.

The dentist seemed frustrated if not disgusted. Then, he did the most unimaginable thing. He proceeded to break the molar into pieces with a sharp-looking chisel, sending chills down my spine. I screamed and started kicking the air wildly. My mother pleaded with him to stop but he took no heed. He even brushed her aside. The deeper he went, the louder I screamed. When the dentist felt that he had most of the root of the stubborn tooth removed, he announced triumphantly, "It's all done!" My mother nearly fainted when she saw that my cheek had swollen like a pomelo. Relief washed over me as I slowly made my way out to the waiting room, which was by then empty except for the two nurses behind the counter. I was not at all surprised that not a patient was in sight.

Much to my annoyance, my mother had to pay for the pain and suffering I had gone through. The shattering experience with an unqualified dentist gave me a phobia of all dentists but this changed when I had the good fortune to be in the care of numerous very good dentists in the later part of my life.
