"Keep Myopia in Check!" Campaign

What is Myopia?

- a medical term for short-sightedness
- a common eye condition that results in blurred distance vision
- the condition can be easily managed with prescription glasses and contact lenses

Why the concern?

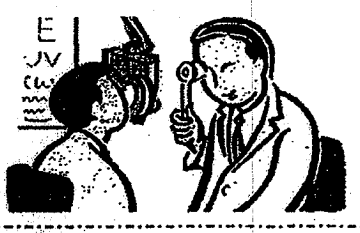

- Myopia is a serious problem in Singapore.
- Singapore has one of the highest rates of Myopia in the world, with 65 per cent among Primary 6 pupils and 28 per cent among those in Primary 1.

What is the main contributing factor?

- According to a study by the Singapore Eye Research Institute, the high childhood Myopia rate in Singapore is largely attributed to the frequent near-distance activities done with handheld gaming devices, personal computers and mobile devices. It is not so much because children in Singapore read a lot in dim lighting or sit too close to the television while watching programmes.

Although Myopia cannot be reversed or cured, it can be slowed down or prevented. The "Keep Myopia in Check!" campaign was first launched in 2014 to drive home this important message. The campaign organiser, Health Focus Singapore (HFS), wants young children and their parents to understand that having good eye care habits can bring Myopia under control. In the first few years, the campaign targeted primary school students. Eye care teams from HFS visited each school biannually to conduct eye checks and give assembly talks. The campaign received positive responses and support from various organisations increased. By 2017, the number of eye care teams had tripled. That allowed HFS to start sending teams to pre-schools as well.

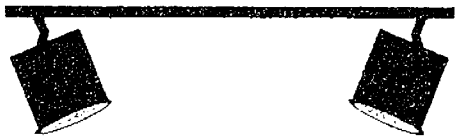

This year, HFS plans to celebrate the campaign's fifth anniversary by engaging the general public in a wide range of activities that promote good eye care.

SOME EYE CARE TIPS

- ☆ Go for regular eye examinations
- ☆ Inculcate good eye care habits from young e.g. good reading distance and posture
- ☆ Spend more time outdoors for the benefits of natural sunlight
- ☆ Take a break to rest your eyes every 30 to 40 minutes. Look out of the window at distant objects to relax the eyes
- ☆ Wear well-fitted contact lenses or glasses with UV protection

For each question from 21 to 28, four options are given. One of them is the correct answer. Make your choice (1, 2, 3 or 4) and shade your answer on the Optical Answer Sheet. (8 marks)

21 Why is Myopia considered a serious problem in Singapore?

(1) Eye care help is not easily available.
(2) The condition cannot be easily managed.
(3) More Primary 1 students are myopic than P6 students.
(4) Many children here have the condition by the time they are 12 years old.

22 The high childhood Myopia rate in Singapore is largely caused by _____.

(1) children reading in dim lighting
(2) ill-fitted glasses and contact lenses
(3) children not keeping a distance from the television
(4) prolonged and incessant use of handheld games and computers

23 What was Health Focus Singapore's main reason for starting the campaign?

(1) to bring Myopia under control
(2) to introduce good eye care habits
(3) to receive support from various organisations
(4) to respond to queries from parents who need more information

24 Which of the following statements is correct about the "Keep Myopia in Check!" campaign in 2019?

(1) It targets mainly school children.
(2) It includes activities that the public can take part in.
(3) It aims to further increase the number of eye care teams.
(4) It will be promoted through assembly talks in secondary schools.

25 What is the similarity between "Eye Fitness" and "Eye Relaxation"?

(1) They teach people eye care exercises.
(2) They invite people to highlight their eye care issues.
(3) They allow people to make eye appointments online.
(4) They offer people free access to eye care resources.

26 By visiting the "Eye Health Food Fair", Mrs Tan can _____.

(1) eat a balanced diet
(2) get a free eye check
(3) find out why she has Myopia
(4) pay less for certain food products

27 According to the 'Some Eye Care Tips' section, _____ is considered a good eye care habit.

(1) reading in a dim corner
(2) going for check-up only when the Myopia worsens
(3) spending time indoors to revise for an examination
(4) taking frequent eye breaks from near-distance work

28 What is the main purpose of the article?

(1) to tell readers about the special promotions in store for them
(2) to get readers involved in the "Keep Myopia in Check!" campaign
(3) to get readers to buy healthy food products that are good for the eyes
(4) to tell readers that Myopia is a condition that is common among children

Have you ever wondered why barbers use a red-and-white pole as a sign of their profession? What has a barber pole got to do with cutting _____(51)_____?

The truth is that it has _____(52)_____ to do with a barber's work today. However, a long time ago, barbers used to perform certain minor operations _____(53)_____ people. One of such _____(54)_____ was known as 'bleeding'. The patient would allow some blood to be taken out of his arm and it was believed that when this 'bad blood' left the body, the patient would _____(55)_____ .

In order to _____(56)_____ the operation, the barber would ask the patient to _____(57)_____ on to a pole tightly. In the old days, every barber always had a pole in his shop. _____(58)_____ the pole was not being used, the bandages were fastened to it and it was placed in the doorway of the shop _____(59)_____ a sign to people that the barber was a good 'bleeder'.

As time went on, people considered it unhygienic to use the pole and bandages that stood in the doorway so the barber painted stripes around a special pole for his advertising sign. The red stripes were meant to remind them of the blood-soaked bandages.

These poles became so identified with barbers _____(60)_____ the custom of having one outside a barber shop has lasted right down to this day.

The beginning of tipping for work done goes back to barbers too. A patient would pay the barber whatever he could _____(61)_____ or whatever he thought the operation was worth. This method of paying spread _____(62)_____ England and soon little boxes appeared in _____(63)_____ like inns and pubs into which people would drop money as _____(64)_____ for services. Read the passage below and answer questions 71 to 80. (20 marks)

There is a chicken rice stall which is well-known to the residents in Jurong, as well as to most of the gourmet loving Singaporeans in other parts of the island. Despite its popularity, it had yet to appear in the Singapore's Finest Food column. However, for seven years, the stall had survived on its regular patrons passing the good reviews by word of mouth.

Ah Soh was a 63-year-old Hainanese woman who came to Singapore from China long ago. She took over the chicken rice stall from her late husband, and single-handedly managed the stall. Many had pestered Ah Soh for her secret recipe, but she swore that it was cooked in the traditional Hainanese way, the recipe of which could be found in any Asian cookbook. For her customers who had no experience in cooking, they only knew that her chicken rice was mouthwatering. Certainly, her satisfied customers could testify to that.

The man with a striped tie looked up at Ah Soh as she placed the plate of chicken rice in front of him. Ah Soh glanced at the name on a security pass that hung on his shirt pocket: Kevin Hong. Kevin patted his pocket and began a sudden lengthy search for his wallet.

Ah Soh beamed a smile, waved at him and in a splattering of Mandarin and English said, "Please ... eat first, okay." Kevin smiled and started eating. Sitting opposite Kevin at the same table, was another man. He was dressed in a white T-shirt with a cartoon of Donald Duck on it. He lifted his hands and said, "One for me, same as him."

Shortly, Ah Soh returned with another plate and laid it before the man, whom she nicknamed Donald Duck. Giving nicknames was a method by which Ah Soh could quickly recall who her customers were. This made it easy for her to match orders and serve her customers their food correctly. Providing good services helped Ah Soh build a good rapport with her customers. She was about to collect money from the two men when Kiat, a regular customer standing at her stall, waved her over. "Three packets of chicken rice," Kiat ordered. "Sure and how are the children, Kiat?" Ah Soh made it a point to know her regular customers through chatting up with them. Doing that also dissipated the boredom of cutting chicken.

After serving Kiat, Ah Soh saw the two men who had ordered chicken rice, rising from their seats. She walked towards the table to collect the payment. She looked down at the table expecting to see two sets of payment. Instead, she saw only a five-dollar note. She looked up and said tactfully, "Excuse me ... one of you didn't pay." Kevin turned and pointed at the table, "I paid five dollars."

"What do you mean you paid? I paid those five dollars." Donald Duck was puffed up in anger. Kevin stood with his hands akimbo, defiant. "What do you mean your five dollars? It's mine!"

Donald Duck looked flustered but insisted it was his. "Do I look like someone who didn't pay?" Kevin asked, sounding offended. Turning to Ah Soh, Kevin suggested, "I will pay for this man's share. I don't think you deserve to be cheated." He then reached into his pocket to pull out his wallet. Donald Duck grabbed Kevin's arm, shaking a finger at him. "You think only you have money? I will pay again. No one is calling me a cheat." He dug into his pants but Ah Soh said, "Never mind never mind, free for the other one."

Kevin and Donald Duck turned to go. Just then, quick-witted Ah Soh thought of a plan to find out who was dishonest. She called out, "Mister, Mister, your change!" Kevin turned around with his hand stretched out, expecting his change. On the other hand, Donald Duck continued walking away as he was the one who did not pay for his food. Suddenly, he realised that he had been tricked. He quickly broke into a run. Kiat, who had been observing the little drama, stepped forward and stood in front of Donald Duck. Donald Duck crashed into him and was clamped in by his strong arms. Sheepishly, Donald Duck handed over five dollars to Ah Soh. "Outwitted by an old woman," Kiat chuckled as he commented.
