Read the passage carefully and answer questions 35 to 41. (8 marks)

One day, Anna was walking home when she noticed something glinting in the grass. When she picked it up, she gasped in surprise. It was a shiny gold medal. It was old and heavy.

Anna looked around to ensure that no one was watching her. Without a moment's hesitation, she slipped the medal into her pocket. She knew it was not the right thing to do but all she could think about was helping her sick mother. She intended to go to Uncle Lee's shop the next day and sell the medal to him. She would then use the money to buy medicine for her mother.

That night, Anna tossed and turned in bed. Should she return the medal to its rightful owner? Should she keep it? Anna was in a dilemma. She kept drifting in and out of sleep.

The next day, Anna went to school as usual. The gold medal was safe in her school bag. She noticed that a crowd had gathered in the canteen. She found out that her classmate Jane had been crying as her father's gold medal was missing. It was the most valuable gift she had ever received from him.

Anna felt guilty. She decided to do the right thing. Her hands were shaking as she took out the gold medal and told Jane the truth. To her surprise, Jane smiled and forgave her.

Section H: Comprehension (Short Response)

Read the passage carefully and answer questions 42 to 48. (8 marks)

My family was having lunch at the famous Bedok Hawker Centre. It was crowded and there were snaking queues at the popular stalls. I looked around and saw a hunched, elderly lady. Her clothes were shabby and the colours had faded. She was unkempt. She shuffled around, begging for food.

"Buy your own food!" shouted a group of youths as they held their noses in disgust. To my horror, a teenage boy at the next table threw an empty drink can at the elderly lady. She managed to avoid it. However, she tripped backwards and almost fell.

My mother and I quickly ran over to the lady to help her. Fury was written all over our faces. The youths were pointing at the lady and laughing. My mother reprimanded the youths, "How could you treat her that way? Would you have done the same to your grandmother? You should be respectful towards the elderly!"

The group stopped laughing and looked ashamed. They left the hawker centre in a hurry, covering their faces with their caps and hands. Several diners were recording the scene on their mobile phones. Others were shaking their heads in disapproval.

As the elderly lady was hungry, my mother bought her a plate of chicken rice and a drink. The lady was very grateful for the kind gesture. "Thank you for the food and drink. I have not eaten for two days," she said. We were glad we had done a good deed.
