GPS NEWSLETTER

ISSUE NO. 1
TERM 1, 2021

Find out what happened at Greenvale Primary School

Before we know it, the action-packed Term 1 has come to an end! The pupil reporters at Greenvale Primary School (GPS) have put together this termly newsletter for parents and friends of GPS. In this issue, let's revisit some of the exciting events in Term 1.

Editor: Lee Xin Yu (Primary 6A)

GREAT BUDDY PROGRAMME

The first day of school was an exciting day for everyone, particularly our Primary 1 pupils. They were excited to start their journey in a totally new school environment with unfamiliar teachers and classmates.

Primary 4 buddies took care of the Primary 1 pupils during recess for four weeks. This helped to put the minds of the parents and pupils at ease. The buddies taught them how to buy food from the canteen and find their way around the school. "I enjoyed meeting my 'little friend' and sharing with him everything about the school," remarked Farhan, one of the buddies.

They shared many positive experiences during the four weeks together. On the last day, the Primary 1 pupils showed their appreciation by making thank-you cards for their buddies. It was indeed a good learning experience for the Primary 4 pupils as they were able to put into action the school values of Graciousness and Charity.

SPORTS DAY

The Primary 4 to 6 pupils have been preparing for Sports Day since the beginning of the term. The event took place on 26 February at Greenview Stadium. The pupils completed their obstacle relays with great teamwork and determination.

The parents had a first-hand experience when they participated in the Parent-Child Race. They were as enthusiastic as their children! The efforts of both the parents and pupils paid off as they contributed points to the four Houses.

At the end of the event, Blue House won with a total of 200 points. The Sports Day ended on a high note with everyone dancing to the tune of "Colours of My Life" at the Mass Workout.

One of the parents, Mr Siva Krishnan, said, "I am proud to see my child displaying one of the school values, which is cooperation!"

Reporter: Chen Jia Le (Primary 5C)

CULTURAL PARADE 2021

On 6 March, the school took 100 Primary 5 pupils to the annual Cultural Parade held at Ruby Street. The parade featured cultural performances by performers from various ethnic groups in Singapore. Despite the gloomy weather, the pupils were enthusiastic and full of energy when they reported to school at 5 p.m. that day. The rain came the moment the pupils reached the venue, but it did not dampen their spirits as they were prepared with ponchos and umbrellas. It was uncomfortable to watch the show in the rain, but fortunately, the skies cleared after half an hour allowing the pupils to have an enjoyable time at the parade.

Reporter: Siti Aisha (Primary 5F)

Have you ever wondered why you feel tired after an online live session? However, you might not feel the same _____ (51) the meeting was held with everyone physically in the same room. This effect, nicknamed "Zoom fatigue", is felt not just by _____ (52) but also by teachers during Home-Based Learning. Many can get worn _____ (53) by back-to-back video meetings as they are forced to learn or work from _____ (54) during the Covid-19 pandemic.

A US scientist says he has identified some key _____ (55) why video calls can be so exhausting. Jeremy Bailenson, from Stanford University, has _____ (56) more than 20 years looking at how different forms of online communication can affect people.

He says the first possible reason video calls can feel tiring is _____ (57) people are constantly making eye _____ (58) with one another as they look at their cameras. During face-to-face meetings or classes, people are usually just looking at the speaker but during an online session, everyone seems to be staring at everyone else.

A second _____ (59) reason for fatigue could be that people are spending more time _____ (60) at themselves on their screens. Previous studies have suggested that staring into mirrors can make people feel more critical about _____ (61) and doubtful of their abilities.

Bailenson's final reason is that it is more _____ (62) to interpret other people's gestures and expressions online. Understanding people's _____ (63) language in a video call requires our brains to work extra hard given a limited camera view.

Working from home also means that many people are not as active as before. Studies have _____ (64) that people can think more creatively when moving around _____ (65) online meetings force people to sit still. This is especially because they need to stay in the camera frame.

Read the passage below and answer questions 71 to 80. (20 marks)

I was born with a condition that caused me to be fitted with artificial legs, which are also known as prosthetics. I got my first prosthetics at just eight months old. Also, my fingers on my left hand were joined together, requiring surgery to separate them. As a result, I only have eight fingers. Despite having no feet and only three fingers on one of my hands, I was not enrolled in any special education school. In school, during physical education classes, I was often picked last to be on any team. I used to get very frustrated and would be really upset about my "fake legs". Moreover, I would always come in last when my friends and I were in running races as I was too slow. It was especially hard playing basketball because I could not jump well since I did not have any ankles. This changed when I got my first pair of Rollerblade skates.

Even though it was difficult to learn to skate, I liked the feeling of being on skates, but most importantly, I was finally able to move just as fast as the other kids. I kept practising and learnt how to get up if I fell. Soon, I got better and faster. Then, when my friends were running races, I would put on a pair of skates and race with them. Win or lose, I was able to keep up. Since skating had become my favourite thing to do, I signed up for my first roller hockey team. Naively, I thought I would just skate up to the net and take a shot at the goal. However, all my attempts were futile. I did not score a single goal that whole season of the tournament.

Thus, I trained hard and the following year, I signed up again. When I got through the try-outs, I was actually put in a team with the older kids. They were much bigger and I became intimidated. They actually stole the puck* from me during the first game and I remembered thinking, "Aren't we in the same team?" I was ready to give in to the pressure and did not want to show up for the next game. My family encouraged me to keep trying, which I did. For the next game, we were losing four to five. When a pass came to me, I took the shot and it flew into the net just as the buzzer went off. I had finally scored a goal and it tied the game. When my team came skating over to me with excitement, I realised that I really could become good at the sport. It would be the first of my many goals and I knew it would not have been possible if not for what my family had done for me before that game.

The next roller hockey team I played with did not even know I wore prosthetics, especially with all the hockey gear I had to wear. During one of the games, one of them kept going towards the net, almost scoring a goal! There was dead silence in the arena. One coach carried me off the rink while another carried my leg. When I got off the rink, everyone just started clapping. All my family and I could do was laugh. When the game was over, people kept coming up to me and shaking my hand like I was the "most valuable player" for the "goal" I had scored.

The old style of prosthetics, where the ankles did not bend, was great for hockey and created an advantage for me over the other players, whose ankles and any bone on their legs could get strained or even break during a game. I also found an amazing prosthetist named Eric. He made me prosthetics with ankles that bent and were good not just for hockey but also for running, jumping, hiking and golf. I could even change my prosthetics according to the sport I was playing.

I have never thought of myself as handicapped but differently-abled. Someday, I will train for the Paralympics, which is the Olympics for the physically challenged. I would have to train hard to be one of the best – just like any other professional. One day, after I had completed a ten-kilometre running race, a friend of mine exclaimed, "What! I could never do that!" I just smiled at him nonchalantly. My philosophy is you just have to go for it. You will never know until you try. As the saying goes, "Anything is possible!" 40
