Calling all parents with children aged 7 to 12! Join us for this fun parent-child exploration session along Rainbow Street! Children will learn the basics of navigation and gain more confidence in wayfinding!

Testimonial from a regular visitor to our library, Levi Yap:

My children and I used to attend events in the SLB's community libraries when they were open. We learnt something new each time! My daughter's favourite part of each visit was talking to the historians at the end of their presentations, which she found very informative. My son, who is younger, loved the interactive activities that challenged his mind. I find visiting the library a great educational experience. I strongly recommend everyone to participate in the fun activities at the library once it reopens.

For event sign-ups, email the Sunshine Library Board at sg2022@slb.com. For enquiries, call 6093 4892 (office).

Read this passage and answer questions 71 to 80 in Booklet B.

I took a deep breath as I stepped into the kite seller's shop, hidden in the bazaar of Lahore, Pakistan. From floor to ceiling, multicoloured kites were stacked in an unorganised manner. Some of these had golden reflectors flashing, like fighter jets ready for takeoff. Others lit up the walls like neon signs.

It was February. We were celebrating the Basant festival, which marked the beginning of spring season. We donned clothes the colour of mustard flowers, bright and yellow, while our grandmothers laboured over large pots of spices, preparing aromatic curries. Also, the spring festival kickstarted the kite-fighting event.

Crowds of excited visitors jammed the streets outside as I gazed at the shop's selection. I longed to send my own fighter kite, to cut away my opponent's string, and to yell, "Slice! I win!" I could most certainly fly a kite as well as any other boy my age. "I'm sure I can cut down many kites at the event," I thought with a grin. However, every spring, as my brother, Amir, and his friends began the rooftop kite-fighting, I had to tear myself away bitterly and trail downstairs behind my girlfriends. We had to change into our silk dresses and join our mothers at the party that my mother hosted each year during the kite-fighting event.

This year, my birthday fell on the weekend of the spring festival, and for my present, I had asked my parents if I could join the boys on the roof. "I never liked the parties," I explained. My parents were surprised. Nevertheless, they handed me some money to go with my brother to buy my very own fighter kite. I could not contain my excitement, pulling my brother to the shop immediately.

"This cute butterfly-shaped kite will be perfect for your sister, Amir," the kite seller suggested, pushing the kite into Amir's hands. Amir frowned, annoyed with his insistence. "She wants a real fighter kite, not this! Oh, and don't forget the strings. She'll need good sturdy ones!" replied Amir. I looked around the shop, eyeing the best fighter kites available. As soon as we got my kite, we rushed home and got up to the rooftop. Drums were booming all around us, signalling the start of the event. I warmed up with my kite, letting out the string in short jerks. I was running around the roof wildly trying to keep my kite in control. With trembling hands, I started to wonder if I was capable of taking down someone else's kite.

Suddenly, our neighbour on the opposite roof challenged Amir to a duel. I watched, as my brother coolly maneuvered his kite upwards, leaning back, keeping his body still and strong. As his fingers and right elbow did all the work, his kite swooped down like a hawk, slashing through his opponent's string. Amir smiled widely as he gestured at me to play against him. "Still and strong!" I reminded myself. Immediately, my kite caught the wind and became one with it. I fell into a rhythm and began swaying calmly with my kite under control. Then, I found my kite flapping close to Amir's. Slowly, I let the string out, the kite soaring higher with each tug. Squinting to see the two strings, I tugged as they touched. "Slice! I win!" I cried. As Amir's kite spiralled downwards, he nodded at me in approval. "Training's over," replied Amir. "Now, let's have a real fight!" I gave him my widest smile.

In a 2018 study, a group of people were asked which of the five senses they would miss most if they lost it. The sense of smell was picked _____ (29) only two percent of the respondents.

Two years later, from all _____ _____ (30) the world, ear, nose and throat doctors saw _____ (31) unusual number of patients who had lost their sense of smell with the outbreak of COVID-19. Suddenly, greater attention was given to _____ _____ (32) sense of smell. Researchers soon found out that a loss of smell was one _____ _____ (33) the main symptoms of COVID-19. Some health experts _____ (34) proposed using smell tests instead of temperature checks to screen people for the virus. However, if a person's sense of smell is not as sharp _____ (35) it used to be, there is no cause for panic. The sense of smell naturally declines _____ (36) age. Apart from age, smoking also dulls the sense more rapidly. This is one more reason _____ (37) urge smokers to quit.

On the other hand, pregnant women have especially sensitive noses. One theory is that the increased sensitivity _____ (38) the course of pregnancy is the body's way of protecting the mother from ingesting toxins. To some, the sense of smell might still be unimportant but imagine not being able to detect odours such as smoke or spoiled milk.

The polar landscape is changing. Polar ice is melting faster than it has in the past. Ice sheets and glaciers always melt a little in summer. However, the winter snows (39) [ ] and cold temperatures usurely replenish whatever has melted away.

(40) [ ] (41) [ ]

In recent years, this balance has fall apart. Now, more ice melts in summer and it forms in winter. Most of this melted water finds its way into the ocean, causing a (42) [ ] rise on sea level. Over the past 20 years, sea level has risen more than 25 millimetres (43) [ ] per year. You may think that this quantity is insiknificant, but the effects of even small (44) [ ] (45) [ ] increases are immence. Storm waves around coastal areas become more catastrofic, (46) [ ] flooding increases and animals lose more of their habitats. Global warming are the answer to why ice is melting faster than before.

(47) [ ]

Since the 1800s, the world have grown hotter at a rate of nearly 0.2 degree (48) [ ] Celsius every ten years. The surche in temperatures is largely due to human activity (49) [ ] like the pursistant burning of fossil fuels. One may ask what they can do to help Earth (50) [ ] and the respond is simple. One can start by taking a walk or riding a bicycle instead of riding in a vehicle. The less energy we use up, the less the impact of global warming.

Emmanuel was exhausted. He had been cycling _____ (51) days. The effort of propelling _____ (52) became more difficult with each turn of the pedal. Emmanuel pedalled using his left leg. His right one was shortened _____ _____ (53) to a missing shinbone at birth. Emmanuel Ofosu Yeboah was on a mission to cycle across the width _____ (54) Ghana, West Africa. He completed the 644-kilometre cycling trek in ten days.

People experiencing disability were not given many opportunities and were _____ (55) down upon in Emmanuel's home country. He wanted to raise awareness on how they were _____ (56). He thought of many ways to do so. However, he knew _____ (57) could be more influential than the media. As such, he embarked on the trek to seek media _____ (58) in covering the plight of the disabled in Ghana. Soon after, articles were written about his cycling journey. The press also wanted to _____ (59) him on television as they were curious about him and his cause. Eventually, books were written _____ (60) even a film was made about him. All of these efforts shed new _____ (61) on the topic of disability and the difficulties faced by people experiencing disability. After Emmanuel's laborious cycling trek across Ghana, he won a cash prize from a multinational sports corporation for his athletic performance. He used the prize _____ (62) to build schools which valued disabled students equally.

His desire for equality was shaped _____ (63) his own past experiences. As a child, he had wanted to be educated among _____ (64) non-disabled friends. Sadly, the school system in the past did not allow that. Emmanuel hoped that the schools that he had set up would enable children experiencing disability to attend school at no _____ (65) cost. Most importantly, he wanted to ensure a bully-free environment in schools – something he had not experienced in his school days.

2. Write a composition of at least 150 words about a helpful act.

The pictures are provided to help you think about this topic.

Your composition should be based on one or more of these pictures.

Consider the following points when you plan your composition:

- What was the helpful act?
- How did the people involved feel?
- What happened in the end?

You may use the points in any order and include other relevant points as well.
