The sport of climbing has seen a surge in interest in recent years. Climbing has also become a popular (16) fixture among co-curricular activities in many schools in Singapore.

When people think of climbers with their lean frames and toned forearms, many have the idea (17) that climbing demands a great deal of power and strength. While those attributes matter, climbing is first and foremost (18) a skill sport – one that requires creative problem solving and an acute sense of balance. A myriad (19) of techniques are also needed to ascend a climb in the most efficient manner possible.

When climbers reach the top, the sense of achievement (20) they experience leads to a deep feeling of euphoria. For those who are looking for an alternative to traditional competitive sports, climbing might just be it.

Canine Massage Therapy (CMT)

Helping dogs' mental and physical needs

In the same way massages help humans relieve a sore back, a stiff shoulder or a busy brain, kneading the dogs' muscles and joints can help them loosen up and relax. In veterinary medicine, dog massage therapy is used as a complementary therapy to help health issues such as stiff joints and muscles, pain, blood circulation and certain injuries. It is also extremely beneficial in senior dogs suffering from aging conditions and dogs that suffer from stress-related anxiety.

Comments from some 'paw-parents'

"After surgery, Cody's right leg was weaker than usual. As he was always stooping in an awkward posture, he was always urinating and defecating onto his own front foot. CMT not only helped Cody regain strength in his affected leg, but it also made his recovery journey less painful. Cody's been sleeping soundly every night ever since we started him on CMT."

~ Susan, paw-parent of an 11-year-old bulldog

"Mocha lost interest in her favourite ball game and became very clingy. I brought her to a vet, but I did not see much improvement. I was really worried and CMT sprung to mind. The vet's medications and CMT worked well together, speeding up Mocha's recovery."

~ Harry, paw-parent of a 6-year-old golden retriever

Benefits of Canine Massage Therapy

Although the outcomes of CMT can vary, depending on the dog's existing health issues, there are usually added benefits a 'paw-rent' can expect.

Physical Benefits

- ✓ Better posture
- ✓ Reduced stiffness
- ✓ Relief from pain
- ✓ Increased joint mobility

Mental Benefits

- ✓ Promote production of a feel-good body chemical
- ✓ Promote production of a body chemical that keep the dogs from becoming depressed

CMT is not quite as simple as giving your dog a shoulder rub. On the contrary, in CMT, intense pressure is applied on specific body muscles. It is important to have your dog seen by a professional.

Read this passage and answer questions 71 to 80. (20 marks)

I stared at the page in disbelief. My eyes almost popped out. Scrawled under my name were the words "Sarah - The Mop". I realised it was a reference to my wildly curly hair! My heartbeat raced, and my face and ears burnt red hot. I wanted to run and hide from the destructive words in the "Slam" book.

I could not imagine anything worse than being twelve and having to live in a new country. Trying to make new friends in a new school, and reading about such hurtful words were simply too much for me to bear.

I had watched during mathematics class as the black book was circulated from desk to desk. Each time the teacher turned towards the whiteboard, the book was swiftly passed from one person to the next. When it landed on my desk, I opened it and I saw them. The vicious comments stabbed my heart. Flipping through the pages, I found out that the perpetrators were the boys in the class. How unkind of them!

Why would the boys write these horrid things? I had only been in the school for a month. I did not even know them. My fragile confidence was shattered. I had tried to make new friends, but it had not been easy. They had all known each other for years.

I turned the pages only to see the names of other girls.

"Amanda – Owl eyebrows, Big rhino lips"

"Courtney – Witch's pointed nose, Blind as a bat"

I was just getting to know Courtney. She lived around the corner from me, and we walked to school on some mornings.

I watched with dread as the vicious book was circulated in the days that followed. Somehow, I knew that this had to be stopped, but how? Determining right from wrong was usually not all that difficult but the scary part was doing it. I had to dig deep to muster my courage. I was not all that brave.

I did not dare to tell the teachers or rant and rave at the boys. Finally, I did the only thing I could do - I refused to participate.

"No. I won't read it," I stammered nervously. Earlier on, the boys mocked anyone who refused to participate. However, I had to fight back even if it meant that I had to be the lone warrior. It took all the courage I had, at a time when I needed friends.

I was encouraged when I noticed other girls saying no, including Amanda and Courtney. Three other girls even ripped out pages which had their names on them. When all the girls refused to participate in it, the boys soon lost interest. Without an audience, the book faded away into oblivion. The old saying, "If you remove the reward, you stop the behaviour" proved true. We eliminated the reward.

I also learnt to understand and welcome differences in people. I admired Amanda's full lips and dark eyebrows. These were I later found out, beautiful features desired by many models and celebrities. Courtney's poor vision did not reduce her incredible wit and intelligence. She made me laugh without fail, and it was never boring to be in her presence. Eventually, we became best friends.

As for me, "The Mop" stayed with me as a nickname. I looked at my tangle of naturally curly hair that wanted to go its own way and eventually came to love it. It was not going to be tamed, and neither was I.
