After 52 years, Yulang Bird Park is about to close. The closure will allow its staff members and avian residents (18) to prepare for the move to Avian Park in the Palm Tree precinct.

Before this familiar (19) landmark is torn down, members of the public are invited to celebrate its legacy through a series of activities. Visitors can go on a self-guided trail peppered with displays of the key milestones (20) in the park's journey or sign up for a tour where seasoned (21) guides share the park's history and little-known anecdotes (22) about its birds and architecture. Those wanting to relive a little bit of nostalgia will be glad to know that the old Panorail Station has reopened, complete with a recreation of the Panorail.

The Panorail system was a popular means of travelling in the park before it was removed and replaced by electric trams in 2013.

2023 Healthy SG

1 – 31 Mar 2023

This annual event is organised as part of Singapore's push for a healthier nation since 1994 and has evolved from a one-day event to a month-long campaign of healthy festivities, culminating in the Keep Fit Bazaar held on 31 March at Lalang Mall. This year, the Healthy Lifestyle Board (HLB) aims to raise awareness of how Singaporeans can eat more healthily and prepare tasty and healthy dishes at home, get more active, build up their mental well-being through positive thinking and take better care of their health through health screenings.

Weekend Road Show

10.30 a.m. – 8 p.m.

- Free basic health screening for all
- Free flu vaccination for citizens above 60 years old
- Live cooking demonstrations using healthier choice products from 4 p.m. – 6 p.m.
- Talks on mental health and tips on managing parenting stress

Road shows will be held at various locations. Check our social media page (https://www.socialbook.com/hlbsg/) or sign up for our news feed (me.live/2023healthysg) for more details.

Refer to the passage below when you answer questions 75 to 84 in Booklet B.

Weirdos. That was what the other students called them, much to their chagrin, especially Alex, who was always prepared to retaliate whenever he heard that name. Sarah, Alex and Michael were a tight-knit group, bonded by their shared love for activities that others would not even consider doing – from conducting extreme experiments to trying on bizarre fashion trends. Once, their experiment resulted in the release of such an overpowering stench that their class had to be relocated to another venue for a week. Such antics sometimes ended up with them being punished. Most recently, they had been warned that they would face suspension if they got into trouble again. To them, these shared experiences only made their bond stronger each time.

One day, the three friends stumbled upon a poster advertising a competition to design a new school shirt for the school. "This looks interesting," remarked Sarah.

"It is just a waste of time. With our talents, we can win this with our eyes closed," Alex snorted.

"Ha! These weirdos are so full of themselves," a boy scoffed loudly within the trio's earshot. His friends sniggered. "Weirdos!" they echoed.

Alex clenched his fists, ready to lunge at the group. "Stop! There are better ways to shut them up. We cannot afford to get into trouble again," Michael warned as he and Sarah quickly restrained Alex, pulling him back. "Let's sign up and prove them wrong. If we win, we even get to set the school's fashion trend!" Sarah exclaimed. "Fine!" Alex spat.

The next day, the trio gathered at their usual hideout. "I still have second thoughts about the competition. We have to make sure our submission is really the best," said Michael. "Remember how we teased John endlessly when his entry for the class camp shirt was rejected?"

"Oh, come on, Michael. We have gone through this before," said Alex, rolling his eyes. "There are three of us working on this whereas John was working alone. Surely three heads are better than one."

As the deadline for the competition approached, tensions began to rise within the group. The trio was under a lot of pressure to deliver a winning design, and they were starting to get frustrated with their lack of progress. Arguments broke out, and tempers flared as they struggled to reach a consensus on the final design. Alex kept insisting on getting his way despite Sarah and Michael's protests that his designs were impractical.

"The boy was right. You are so full of yourself, Alex," Sarah muttered. "You've stopped listening to our views since we started on this. Can't you see how it is affecting us?" Alex stared at Sarah and then at his feet. He uttered, "I know I can be a little insistent at times. I just want to win so badly. Can't you see that?" Sarah let out a sigh. "We want to win too. Can't YOU see that? We are a team. You cannot let your fixation on winning cloud your judgement. We have to work together."

Turning his attention back to their plans, Alex began embracing his teammates' suggestions. They began building on each other's ideas. In the end, the team managed to submit their design just before the deadline. As they waited for the results to be announced, they were apprehensive and wondered if they would face the same outcome as John.

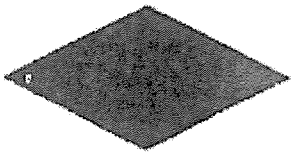

When the results were finally announced, the team was elated to find that they had won first place! "Told you we can win this with our eyes closed!" Alex grinned. Sarah rolled her eyes and laughed, "Yeah, right." Alex admitted, "Fine, only because we worked together." "That's more like it," Michael added.
