One sunny afternoon, Lisa and her brother, Kean, were out exploring when they stumbled upon an old house. The paint was peeling and the windows were covered in thick layers of dust. Lisa asked, "Kean, do you think there is something scary in this house?" Kean replied, "I am not sure. There's only one way to find out. Let's just enter and explore!" Reluctantly, Lisa nodded in agreement.

Taking a deep breath, Lisa and Kean approached the house bravely. They gently pushed open the creaky door and stepped inside cautiously. As they entered, they heard a noise coming from upstairs. It sounded like something they had heard before. Fear gripped them but out of curiosity, they continued exploring. As they climbed the stairs, the noise became louder. Lisa muttered, "I am really scared now."

Kean squeezed her hand. "Don't worry, Lisa. We will be fine." At the top of the stairs, they found a frightened kitten hiding in the corner. Lisa heaved a sigh of relief as Kean gently picked it up. "You poor thing! You are the one making the noise!"

"It looks like this house is just home to a little furry friend!" Kean exclaimed. Lisa and Kean carried the kitten outside and noticed a lady looking around worriedly. When she saw them with the kitten, she ran up to them and said, "I have been looking for my kitten for hours!"

The lady thanked Lisa and Kean as they returned her the kitten. Walking back home, Lisa said to Kean, "There was actually nothing to be scared about." Kean agreed. He was glad that their curiosity had led to the discovery of the lost kitten.
