Section D: Comprehension Open-Ended (5 marks)
Read the passage carefully and answer answer questions 26 to 30. Write your answers in complete sentences.

It is not a bad life. I am warm and well fed. But my world is small. It is just 18 inches from side to side and back again. The floors are covered with bits of wood. I like the smell. The walls, well, they are not really walls. I can see through them. They are made of wires. I suppose almost everyone would call this a cage. But to me, it is home. I have an amusement park ride in my little room. But there is no bed – just the floor. My kitchen is made of little plates that are attached to the wire walls.

You may have guessed by now that I am quite small. I am large for a hamster, but smaller than most members of this family, except the goldfish. That fellow is very small. His home has glass walls. I do not know what he does for fun.

The cat eyes me now and then, but he has given up on getting a mouthful of me. When I am tired of spinning on my running wheel, I like to drive him crazy. First, I rattle something. The noise perks him up. Then I run around. Sometimes I stick my tongue out. That really sends him around the bend.

Yes, life is good. I wish, however, that I had more say about coming and going. Often, people just lift my whole house without asking if it is all right with me. I know that they are just trying to be nice. However when they pick up my abode and carry it around, it feels like an earthquake or something! Up and down! Side to side! Did they forget that I have feelings too? This act often leaves me in a state of dizziness. When that happens, I mutter some prayers and hang on for my dear life. I just hope that the journey is a short one.
