Read the passage below and answer questions 5 to 10. (12 marks)

Pong was an eleven-year-old boy. He had a fear of heights. It was a secret that no one else knew. However, one day, his big brother, Don, read his diary and mocked him about his fear. Turning red with anger, Pong shoved his brother before sprinting towards the playground. Tears welled up in his eyes.

"I have to overcome my fear... I wish someone could help me," Pong whispered to himself. He sighed and looked around him. Then he spotted a young boy climbing a bouldering wall. He could see that the boy was having a bit of trouble, but he persisted and climbed higher and higher. Pong's jaw dropped in awe. He was envious of this little hero. Curious, Pong walked towards the boy. He wanted to find out more.

As soon as the boy saw Pong, he smiled. "Hello, I am Luke. What's your name? Would you like to climb with me?" the boy asked. Then he made a swift descent from a height. Pong shook his head profusely and stammered, "No, thank you. It's too high... I don't think I can climb the wall without falling. By the way, my name is Pong. You are brave, Luke. Aren't you afraid that you might fall or lose your balance?"

Hearing Pong's question, Luke chuckled and said, "I was scared before but not anymore. My father helped me overcome my fear. At first, I kept falling and hurting myself. Eventually, I became better at it. It's not that high. In fact, I have tried rock climbing, which is similar to this. Would you like to try? I can help you." Pong felt inspired. He nodded his head and walked towards the bouldering wall. Luke put his hand on Pong's shoulder and assured him, "You can do it, Pong. Just take one step at a time." As Pong began climbing, he felt his heart beating faster and faster. He was afraid that he would fail.

True enough, after three steps, Pong lost his grip and fell with a gentle thud. Luke helped him up and asked him if he was hurt. Despite this setback, Pong shook his head and tried climbing again. This time, he brushed his doubts aside. As Pong climbed higher and higher, Luke cheered him on from the ground. He encouraged Pong to climb to the top of the wall.

After a dozen attempts, Pong achieved his goal. "I did it! I can't believe that I finally succeeded!" Pong exclaimed. Luke clapped and cheered. As soon as Pong descended, he hugged Luke and thanked him profusely. Luke simply nodded and said, "I never doubted you for a second." Pong was touched. He looked at Luke for a moment. Pong realised Luke was a priceless gift. It was one that he would cherish forever.
