Mrs Tumble loved reading. She liked to borrow many books from the public library.

One day, Mrs Tumble received a warning from the librarian. Mrs Tumble had forty-five books that were overdue and she would not be allowed to borrow any more books until they were returned. Mrs Tumble was horrified.

After three weeks, Mrs Tumble returned every book that she had borrowed. The librarian even sent a delivery man to Mrs Tumble's home to collect the library books which were too heavy for Mrs Tumble to carry back to the library.

However, Mrs Tumble's bad habit soon returned. This time, the librarian sent her a letter stating that her library membership was cancelled. Mrs Tumble was shocked and felt gloomy. Then, she had a bright idea. "I will go to the bookshop! I can sit on a sofa and read as much as I like," she thought.

In the bookshop, Mrs Tumble took many books from the shelves and placed them next to the sofa. Soon, the other customers could not find any good books on the shelves, and many decided not to visit the bookshop anymore.

"Every day, you take the good books and hoard them in a pile beside you. The other customers do not get a chance to buy them," grumbled the bookshop manager.

Comprehension 2 (10 marks)
Read the following passage carefully and answer questions 41 to 48.

It was a hot day. Jude was at the beach when he heard a sad, wailing sound coming from the ocean. It was like nothing he had ever heard before.

He scrambled up a hill and looked down. He saw a baby whale stuck on some rocks and was unable to move. It was low tide. Jude knew that this whale was going to be stuck for at least eight more hours until the tide rose later in the day. The baby whale's family was in the distance, watching helplessly. They were calling to it.

Jude had never encountered a stranded whale before. He tried to keep it cool and wet throughout the day. Jude ran back and forth to fill his bucket with cool sea water to pour over the baby whale's body. Jude was soon exhausted. Jude called his father and told him about the whale. His father soon arrived. Working together, they did their best to keep the whale as cool and as comfortable as possible.

As the tide rose, Jude and his father climbed up onto the nearby hill and waited. They watched as the water level slowly began to cover its body. Soon it could wriggle its body from left to right. It lifted its tail slightly to check the level of the water. Suddenly, with two giant thrusts, it swam off away from the rocks. A wave of relief washed over Jude and his father as they saw the baby whale's family swimming towards it. Soon, the baby whale was reunited with its family.

Jude was glad that he had encountered the baby whale. It was fortunate that Jude had spotted it in distress. If he had not, it would have been stranded alone on the rocks, suffering under the heat of the sun.
