Dear Diary,

Today was amazing! Before getting on the plane, I explored the Sunflower Garden at Changi Airport. That morning, the sunny garden provided me a healthy dose of Vitamin D. In the fast-moving airport environment, nature has a soothing effect on those who might feel stressed out by the pace of travel.

From the rooftop garden, you can see the runway and planes. The special lighting transforms the garden into a mesmerising scene at night. The sunflowers are so exquisite because they turn to face the sun. The flower heads can be as big as my head, too.

Do you know that these sunflowers are grown in a nursery at the airport? Approximately ninety days is all they take to grow and at least 2,000 sunflowers grow every month. There are about fifty species of budding flowers in it. Depending on the season, you can see at least two species of sunflowers like Sunflower Sunshine and Sunflower Ring of Fire.

The Horticulture team works tirelessly to keep the garden beautiful so that it always looks its best. Old flowers are replaced with new ones weekly as they last about a week.

The short visit there was worth it as it made me feel relaxed for my trip.

Love,
Pei Han

"Pass it to me!" Bala exclaimed. Bala and his friends were out playing soccer after school at the school field. They were having a whale of a time.

However, soon, dark ominous clouds covered the once brightly lit sky. It began to drizzle and then pour. All of Bala's friends immediately headed home.

"Come on Bala!" James called out, "You cannot fall sick. I need you at my birthday party tomorrow!"

"Let me play. I need to practise to win the next soccer game," Bala bellowed at James.

Bala ignored his best friend's advice and continued kicking the ball around. After thirty minutes of playing in the rain, Bala walked home, drenched and covered in mud. When his mother caught sight of him ambling into the house, she was shocked to see him dripping wet. It was then that realisation dawned on her.

"Why have you been out playing in the rain?" Bala's mother reprimanded Bala harshly like a fire-breathing dragon.

"Go and take a hot shower! Right now!" Bala's mother boomed.

Bala ignored the advice. Instead of doing what his mother had instructed, Bala went up to his room to play computer games. After a while, he felt tired and slept soundly on the bed.

The next morning, Bala woke up. His body felt like it was on fire and his lips were very dry. Weakly, he begged his mother to take him to the doctor. At the clinic, the doctor examined Bala thoroughly. The doctor prescribed him some medicine and told him to rest.

"I should have not played in the rain! Now, I have to miss James's birthday and the next soccer match," Bala lamented remorsefully. He promised to always obey his mother's instructions and never to play soccer in the rain again.
