TOP TIPS TO BEAT THE HEAT

Stay safe and comfortable during these hot months with these essential tips.

Stay hydrated
Drink plenty of water throughout the day. Take a bottle of water when you are out and about.

Dress down
Wear lightweight, light-coloured, loose fitting clothes. Choose to wear T-shirts or shorts.

Eat light
Consume smaller, light meals. Eat food like salads and fruits. They contain water and are more refreshing in hot weather than hot food.

Take a cool shower
Cool showers can help you cool down when you feel hot by lowering your body temperature.

Seek shade
Wear a hat or use an umbrella. Stay under the shade during peak sun hours, especially between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Avoid strenuous activity
Limit outdoor activities during the hottest part of the day. Opt for lighter activities or indoor activities during extreme heat.

WATCH OUT

- Be on the lookout for any symptoms of heat-related illness.
- See your family doctor if you are unwell.
- In a medical emergency, call 995.

Text 2

The extract is taken from an article in the school's newsletter about how a student ended up with heat exhaustion.

Have you ever experienced heat exhaustion – a condition whereby your body gets too hot and cannot cool down? I experienced that on a particularly hot afternoon during the June holidays. It all started when I decided to go jogging despite my mother's advice to wait until it was cooler. As a member of the school's track and field team, I was convinced that I could handle the heat. The sun was blazing down as I jogged through Ang Mo Kio Park. At first, I felt great. But soon, I started feeling dizzy and nauseous. My skin turned red and blotchy, and a painful, itchy rash appeared on my arms and neck.

By the time I stumbled back home, I was lightheaded and perspiring profusely. My mother took one look at me and knew I had heat exhaustion. She quickly helped me to the bathroom and guided me into a cool shower. The water was such a relief, washing away the perspiration and cooling my overheated body. I stayed in the shower until I felt my temperature normalise. Afterwards, I rested in a cool room, drinking plenty of water. This experience taught me to always exercise early in the morning or late in the evening and to never underestimate the heat of the sun.

21 The main purpose of the poster in Text 1 is to _____.

(1) offer treatments for heat-related illnesses
(2) provide scientific explanations on why the tips work
(3) advise people on how to take necessary precautions
(4) guarantee complete protection for all heat-related illnesses

22 "Top tips to beat the heat." The pictures in Text 1 support this by providing _____.

(1) an illustration for each tip given
(2) a representation of the hot weather
(3) an explanation on how to follow the tips
(4) detailed steps of how to combat heat-related illness

(Go on to the next page)

Downloaded from SingaKids.com

23 According to the poster in Text 1, which of the following is false?

(1) Avoid wearing dark-coloured clothes when out on a hot day.
(2) Wearing a hat or taking an umbrella will help beat the heat.
(3) We should stay indoors during the hottest time of the day.
(4) We should only eat salads and fruits on a hot day.

24 "Have you ever experienced heat exhaustion?" Why did the writer ask the question in Text 2?

(1) to provide a definition for "heat exhaustion"
(2) to engage the readers by reflecting on their experiences
(3) to make readers think about the meaning of "heat exhaustion"
(4) to request for information from the readers about heat exhaustion

25 The information presented in Text 1 is credible because in Text 2 _____.

(1) the writer thought she could stay safe in the hot blazing sun
(2) the writer's body temperature dropped after taking a cool shower
(3) the writer's mother could identify the symptoms of heat-related illness
(4) the writer did not realise that she was suffering from heat-related illness

Mother's life revolved around the kitchen. She would prepare nasi lemak with extra omelette for my older brother, Meng, and extra spicy laksa for me. These were the dishes Mother took special care to master. Food kept the family together.

Mother would also make us chocolate cookies. Oh, they were just how we liked them. Eagerly, Mother presented her cookies one Sunday during lunch. "Try them while they're still hot," Mother chirped, seemingly pleased with herself. However, we were hesitant to do so – we no longer liked eating them so much. Meng blurted out, "Mother, you don't have to make yourself so busy. We can easily buy chocolate cookies from the bakery." Being a non-athletic person, I made up an excuse saying that I could not eat the cookies as I was preparing for my upcoming running competition. I cast Mother a sheepish glance. Without making any eye contact, Mother walked back to the kitchen with her plate of cookies. For the rest of the lunch, she ate in stony silence.

At breakfast the next morning, Mother announced that she was officially going to take a break from cooking. She had concluded that we no longer needed her food, or her. We went by the whole week with take-away food. In fact, we were quite pleased with not having to eat Mother's usual dishes. Mother looked strangely more tired than before even though she did not have to prepare meals for us. Feeling concerned, we asked her to go for her annual medical check-up. We were relieved that the doctor told us that she was in the pink of health.

In our free time, we tried to engage Mother with a hobby which she previously had no time for. "Shall we have a game of chess, Mother?" Meng asked enthusiastically as he set up the chess set. Mother, however, stubbornly refused.

Soon, we had had enough of burgers and pizzas and now longed for Mother's laksa. One day while watching television, I told Mother, "I'm visiting the elderly in the nursing home tomorrow. They're looking for a volunteer to cook. Perhaps you can just prepare your signature fried noodles and two side dishes." My request was greeted with silence. Mother simply got up and walked back to her room. That night, I tossed and turned in bed.

I awoke to the clattering of pots. It was music to my ears! That familiar tantalising aroma filled the whole house. "The kitchen has come alive once again!" I whooped in delight.

That afternoon, Mother and I laid the trays of food for the elderly of the nursing home. "Many residents raved about my great cooking skills after finishing their food," Mother chirped as she beamed from ear to ear. As we cleared the plates, the elderly even requested for Mother to cook for them again. "There're people who enjoy my home-cooked food," Mother gushed. "Like them, we also enjoy your food very much. Will you forgive us?" I apologised sincerely. To my relief, Mother smiled. That evening, Meng and I enjoyed Mother's laksa. It was a simple meal that warmed the cockles of our hearts.
