Text 2

The extract below is from an article in a magazine.

People with disabilities are much more than their conditions. Just like everyone else, they have unique talents, dreams, and abilities. For example, someone who uses a wheelchair might be an amazing artist, a brilliant student, or a fantastic athlete. Their disability does not limit their potential; it is just one part of who they are. With the right support and understanding, they can achieve great things, just like anyone else.

There are many inspiring stories of people with disabilities who have succeeded in amazing ways. For instance, athletes with disabilities have won gold medals, and scientists with disabilities have made groundbreaking discoveries. These individuals show us that challenges do not stop you from reaching your goals. By focusing on their strengths and talents, we can see how everyone has the potential to shine and make a difference.

Section I: Comprehension (20 marks)

Read this passage below and answer questions 66 to 75

"You have to see this place for yourself!" Mia exclaimed to Aishah and Limei while showing off her second-hand finds at her birthday party.

"Where is it?" Aishah asked.

"Take us there! You've been talking about it non-stop," Limei added.

Mia had recently become fascinated with thrift shops. After noticing her friends' curiosity, Mia decided that it was time for them to experience the magic of thrift shopping firsthand.

Mia and her friends stepped into the musty shop. It was a maze of colourful racks and shelves brimming with clothes, books, and intriguing knick-knacks. Limei and Aishah hesitated, their eyes wide with amazement.

Mia shared enthusiastically, "The things here are amazing! You can't find them in shopping malls." She picked up a dusty box and opened it. Inside, old glass toys, hand-painted with cheerful colours, sparkled in the soft light.

"Wow," whispered Aishah in awe, cautiously picking up a tiny coloured glass marble to inspect it. "It's beautiful."

Mia's face lit up. "Each of these toys has a story. Look at the details on this little car — someone took so much care in painting it. That's the charm of thrift shops — they're full of items with history."

Mia herself had been skeptical about thrift shops at first. The idea of visiting a thrift shop to get second-hand items seemed strange. She was used to shopping at modern malls where she could get the latest trends and brand-new items. However, one Saturday morning, Mia's mother had suggested they visit a thrift shop to look for decorations and clothes for Mia's Barbie themed birthday party.

"Thrift shop?" Mia had wrinkled her nose. "Why would we go there? I'd rather go to the mall."

Mia's mother had smiled patiently. "Trust me, Mia. Thrift shops are like treasure hunts. You never know what unique items you might find. Besides, we might not be using these themed decorations and clothes again."

Eventually, Mia had agreed to go to the thrift shop with her mother. That Saturday, Mia went home with several treasures and a changed mind.

"Mia! Come take a look at this jacket. It feels like it's from a movie!" Aishah exclaimed, jolting Mia back to the present. Mia joined her friends and her eyes fell on a shimmering blue jacket with shoulder pads and huge shiny buttons.

"This jacket looks stunning!" Limei exclaimed. "I have never seen anything like this in our malls. Are you getting it?"

Aishah's smile grew. "I want to! I can also save so much money! Look at these prices!" She pointed to the tags on various items. Their prices were unbelievably low compared to modern malls selling highly priced goods.

Mia nodded. "That's the beauty of thrift shopping! However, thrift shopping isn't just about buying cheaper things even though thrift shops make it possible for everyone to find unique items that are affordable. It is also about helping to reduce waste when we get second-hand items instead of buying new ones."

Aishah and Limei looked around the thrift shop with new appreciation. They had never thought that they could do something positive by shopping at thrift shops.

Downloaded from SingaKids.com

The three friends left the thrift shop, carrying their new treasures with pride. Mia's heart swelled with satisfaction. She had introduced her friends to the magic of thrift shopping and now Mia's appreciation for thrift shopping had turned into a shared adventure.	45
