The history of chocolate is as rich and exciting as its taste! Archaeological (21) [ ] (22) [ ] aveedence shows that chocolate is made from cacao beans, which are first used in ancient Mexico around 3500 years ago. At that time, drinks were made with cacao and (23) [ ] chilli, ingredients which were asosiated with power and wealth. These beverages were (24) [ ] diffrent from the chocolate that we know today - they were very bitter.

(25) [ ] The cacao tree, from which these beans come from, is native in Central and South America. This tree thrives in tropical rainforests, and each cocoa fruit pod (26) [ ] contains about 40 cacao seeds. The seeds are dried and roasted to creating cocoa beans, which are then used to make chocolate products.

(27) [ ] (28) [ ] On the 16th century, as bitterness was linked to mediseral properties, chocolate (29) [ ] was consumed for its perceived health banifits. However, once sugar was added, (30) [ ] chocolate transformed into a sweet treat and quickly becoming a favourite among the royalty in Europe. Not long after, the beverage evolved into the solid chocolate bars we are familiar with today!
