It was school holidays. Jenny and her brother, Tom, were spending a few days at their grandparents' house.

In the morning, Jenny and Tom played in the garden. When they saw Grandpa busy watering the flowers and trimming the plants, they knew they had to do something. With a bucket in their hands, they started to pick some ripe tomatoes. Grandma cooked chicken rice and vegetable soup for lunch. Jenny and Tom ate everything on their plates. After lunch, they also had some chocolate cookies baked by Grandma. They were moist and chewy, the best cookies they had ever eaten!

"Grandpa, can we go cycling in the park? It is a cool day and there is gentle breeze blowing," Jenny asked. Grandpa smiled, nodding his head. The children then went to the storeroom to get their bicycles. After checking that the pedals and brakes worked, they started cycling to the park.

At night, Grandma made dumplings for dinner. When it was time to go home, Jenny and Tom thanked their grandparents for their wonderful time there. They wished that they could stay longer there.
