Sam did not like to spend time outdoors. Knowing this, his father would always encourage him to go out and play with his friends. Although Sam often played basketball, he did not enjoy it as he was not good at it. However, there was one thing that Sam loved to do and that was dance.

Seeing that Sam loved to dance, his parents decided to sign him up for dance classes. The dance steps taught in class were tricky and exhausting. However, he did not give up.

One day, Sam's dance instructor asked him if he would like to join a talent show. Sam agreed excitedly. In order to prepare for the talent show, Sam practised his dance steps every day. On the day of the talent show, Sam saw how good the other dancers were. He became worried. When it was his turn, he went on stage and danced without missing a step. The audience clapped and cheered after his performance.

Soon, it was time to announce the result. When the winner was announced, Sam was sad as he did not win. His parents comforted him and told him that he could try again next year. Linda could not believe her eyes. Barry had never shown any interest in baking. Linda pinched herself. She wanted to know if she was dreaming.

"Why did you bake these cookies?" asked Linda.

"I am practising for the school's baking competition. I saw the poster yesterday and the top prize is a laptop. I want to win it!" replied Barry excitedly.

Linda had seen the competition poster the previous week and wanted to take part in it too. She did not tell Barry about the competition as she thought that he would not be interested. Linda was confident that she would win the competition as she had attended baking lessons. She also baked regularly with her mother. However, when she tasted one of Barry's cookies, she felt less confident. It tasted delicious! She was worried that Barry would win the competition.

"Is it delicious?" Barry asked. Linda shook her head. Disappointed, Barry threw all the cookies into the rubbish bin. As Linda was about to leave the kitchen, she heard Barry crying. She immediately regretted what she had done.
