Section C: Comprehension
Read the passage below and answer questions 11 to 19.

Leonardo da Vinci was born in 1452 Vinci, Italy. As a child, Leonardo loved spending time in nature, where his curiosity grew. As a teenager, he moved to Florence, Italy, to study art, where he began his painting lessons. He learnt to mix coloured powder with egg yolk and water, to create paint.

Leonardo was not just an artist, he was an inventor. He wrote nearly 20,000 pages of notes filled with ideas, observations and inventions. One of his unusual habits was backward writing, where all the letters were reversed. As such, it was harder for others to read his notes. This might had helped to keep his ideas safe.

Among his many inventions, Leonardo sketched designs for a flying machine. He was one of the first people to seriously study human flight. When the Duke of Milan asked him to paint a mural for his palace, Leonardo painted "The Last Supper", the artwork that first helped him gain fame.

Leonardo also began work on the Mona Lisa, a painting famous for its smile and eyes that seem to follow the viewer. Later, Leonardo moved to Amboise, France and became the official painter for the King. He spent the rest of his life there, continuing to create, learn, and inspire generations with his brilliance.

SECTION C: Comprehension (10 marks)

Read the following passage carefully and answer questions 11 to 19.

Joe was playing with his new football at the playground. It was a present from his father.

Soon, Joe felt thirsty so he placed his football near the slide. He went to get his water bottle from the bench near the playground. After drinking, he returned to the playground. To his surprise, he saw his neighbour, Peter, kicking his new football. Joe frowned. He did not like anyone playing with his football without his permission. "That football is mine. Return it to me now!" Joe yelled.

Peter looked at Joe and said cheekily, "How do I know if this football really belongs to you? I do not see your name on it! I found the ball and so it's mine!"

When Joe heard that, he ran towards Peter and gave him a hard push. Peter tumbled onto the ground and wailed loudly. Joe grabbed his football, turned his back on Peter and left for home. As he walked away, he could still hear Peter crying.

Back at home, Joe felt less angry. He told his mother about what had happened. After listening to Joe, she agreed that Peter had not done the right thing. She also said that it was wrong of Joe to have pushed Peter in a fit of anger. She told Joe that he needed to apologise to Peter. Joe nodded.

He ran back to the playground immediately. Peter was still there. Joe said sorry to Peter for pushing him. Peter also apologised to Joe for playing with his football without asking him first.

"Peter, why don't we play football together every Friday?" asked Joe, holding his hand up for a high five. Peter returned the high five and agreed. Joe was happy to start a friendship with his neighbour whom he could play with often.
