One afternoon, Mark's mother and Mark were in the kitchen when the doorbell rang. She opened the door and saw a man holding a clipboard in one hand and his staff identity card in the other. He introduced himself as Mr Lee from the Yuping Town Council.

Mr Lee explained to Mark and his mother that he was doing checks in the neighbourhood as many households had reported water leakages. Mark's family had noticed a small leak in the kitchen two days ago so his mother invited Mr Lee in to take a look.

After Mr Lee surveyed the area for water damage, he looked under the sink and traced the leak. Mr Lee pointed to where the leak had started. He also shared simple tips on how to prevent leaks, such as checking for wet spots and turning taps off tightly.

After some time, Mr Lee replaced the faulty drain pipe to stop the leak. He told Mark and his mother to contact a plumber if it leaked again. Before he left, he handed Mark a small booklet on saving water. Mark thanked Mr Lee for his help before bidding farewell to him.

Mark read the tips in the booklet. He learnt about the importance of saving resources and picked up ways on how to use water wisely.

Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow.

Ted stared at his examination paper. His heart sank. He had scored only 28 out of 100 marks for his Mathematics examination. It was also the lowest score he had ever received.

At home, Ted's parents were disappointed with his result but they did not scold him. Instead, they sat down with him and asked him what had gone wrong. Ted admitted that he had not been paying attention in class and often did not complete his homework.

His father told him that he should complete his homework immediately after taking his shower every day after school. "This sounds like a good plan," his mother said. She added that Ted should sleep by 9 p.m. every night so as to stay awake and be alert during lessons in school the next day. Ted agreed to try out what they had suggested as he knew he had to start being responsible.

For the next few weeks, Ted followed his parents' suggestions. At first, he found word problems very difficult. He started asking questions whenever he was in doubt during lessons. In addition, he did extra practices daily. Gradually, he began to enjoy solving word problems.

For the next Mathematics examination, Ted felt more confident. He checked his answers carefully and tried his best. When his teacher handed back the marked paper, Ted's eyes widened. He scored 76 marks! His hard work had paid off! Ted showed his result to his parents. They gave him a big hug and said, "Ted, we are so proud of you for taking ownership of your schoolwork and being persistent in your learning!" They were pleased that their son had learnt his lesson.
