Comprehension 1

Read the passage and answer questions 31 to 37. (8 marks)

Dear Diary,

Something truly frightening happened today. Ben and I had planned a fishing trip. We were so excited as we set off in our small boat, hoping to catch lots of fish. However, things went horribly wrong.

Not long after we got out to sea, the sky turned dark. Strong winds blew across the water. I was shaking with fear Ben remained composed and focused. Trembling from head to toe, I could see that Ben was trying hard to row us back to shore. However, the wind was too strong. Suddenly, a huge wave crashed down and knocked our only paddle right out of Ben's hand!

We were stuck and wondered if anyone would save us. Soon, Ben started screaming at the top of his lungs for help. I thought we would never be found.

Then, out of nowhere, we saw a boat coming toward us. It was Mr Mario, the kind man who owned the boat shop near the beach! He helped us into his boat. I had never been so thankful in my life. He wrapped us in warm blankets and took us back safely.

Once we reached the shore Ben heaved a sigh of relief while I returned the blankets. Ben thanked him profusely for saving us. I would never forget his kindness.

From,
John

Comprehension 2

Read the passage and answer questions 38 to 44. (10 marks)

Jane was an intelligent girl who always excelled in her schoolwork. However, she was not fond of helping her parents with the housework. Although her family could afford to hire a helper, they chose not to.

"We believe you can learn to be responsible," she remembered Mother's words.

Father agreed with Mother, so Jane was tasked with household chores on weekends. She found them tiring and boring. One Saturday morning, Mother hung out the clothes to dry before leaving for work. Then, Father reminded Jane to bring them in if it started to rain Jane, engrossed in an exciting book, simply nodded without paying much attention

"The sky looks cloudy, so it's going to rain later. Don't forget what I told you!" Father repeated before going out.

Soon, Father's words came true and dark clouds filled the sky Jane was still absorbed in her reading until a sudden boom of thunder gave her a fright. Only then, she noticed that it had started to rain. She remembered Father's reminder and rushed to the window to gather the laundry.

To her horror, she discovered that all the clothes, including the costume she had planned to wear for that night's Halloween costume party at Tina's house, were completely soaked. Jane realised that she had nothing to wear to the party. At that moment, Father came home. Jane looked up at him guiltily.

A deep flush of anger flared across Father's face, his cheeks burning crimson. "Since your costume is wet, you cannot attend the party. That will be your punishment," he told Jane strictly Jane's heart sank. "I should have listened to my parents," she muttered.
