Section F: Comprehension (Passage A)

Read the passage below carefully and answer questions 33 to 38. (8 marks)

Each morning, Uncle Raj wheeled his wooden prata cart into the heart of Toa Payoh. His cart was filled with the mouth-watering aroma of crispy roti prata and rich, spicy curry.

Uncle Raj had recently moved from another estate where his business had failed. Determined to start afresh, he spent his last savings fixing up his cart - adding new wheels, a bright red sign, and fresh ingredients. Still, customers were hard to come by.

To make things worse, Mr Lim, the grumpy coffee shop owner next door, often made sarcastic comments. "People don't want prata," he would say. "They want their kopi and toast. You'll never make it here."

Despite the harsh words, Uncle Raj kept going. He had no wish to be anyone's enemy. Believing that he should focus on making his prata better, he worked harder to perfect his technique. Other than flipping the prata with care, and making the curry just spicy enough, he was always smiling. Unfortunately, no matter how hard he tried, the customers did not come. He was running out of ingredients and ideas.

One morning, an interested girl named Mei Lin approached Uncle Raj. "Your prata smells amazing! Can I try one?" she asked.

Uncle Raj smiled brightly and replied warmly, "Of course! First prata's free for newcomers."

Mei Lin took a bite. Her eyes widened and she exclaimed, "This is delicious!"

The next day, she brought her classmates. Then, came their families. Soon, Uncle Raj was selling out every morning. He added creative new flavours - cheese, banana, even chocolate prata. Customers loved the twist on tradition.

Even Mr Lim admitted, "Didn't think prata would become the crowd favourite." That evening, Uncle Raj stood proudly by his cart. A new sign gleamed: Raj's Famous Prata -Tradition with a Twist.

Section G: Comprehension (Passage B)

Read the passage carefully and answer questions 39 to 46. (10 marks)

Roald Dahl was born in Wales in 1916 to Norwegian parents. As a child, he loved chocolate and sweets, which later inspired him to write "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory." His childhood was not always happy though - he lost his sister and father at a young age. Also, he had some terrible experiences at boarding school where teachers were very strict.

When he grew up, Dahl became a fighter pilot during World War II. He was very brave and flew many dangerous missions until he was injured in a terrible plane crash. While recovering, he began writing about his adventures, which sparked his interest in becoming an author. His first children's book, "James and the Giant Peach," was published in 1961.

Dahl went on to write many beloved children's books, including "Matilda", "The BFG" and "The Witches". He wrote in a special way that children loved. His stories were funny. Influenced by his time in the air force and his experiences at school, the stories were also sometimes quite dark, filled with horrible villains and clever children who outsmarted them. He made up wonderful new words like "snozzcumber" and "whizzpopping," which made his readers laugh out loud.

Every day, Dahl would write his stories in a small hut in his garden, sitting in an old armchair with a special writing board on his lap. He always used yellow paper and pencils and would spend hours crafting his tales. Standing at 1.98 metres, he was very tall! Despite that, he managed to squeeze himself into this tiny writing space where he created his magical worlds.

Dahl died in 1990, but his literary works continue to enchant children globally. His stories have been translated into many languages and turned into successful films. Today, he is remembered as one of the greatest children's authors of all time, who showed that with imagination and creativity, anything is possible.
