Refer to the passage below when you answer questions 66 to 75 in Booklet B.

Sports Day Race was the biggest event of the school year. Classes gathered on the track under a blazing sun, buzzing like bees in anticipation. Donald was no exception. "This race is going to be thrilling. I just love it!" he thought to himself as he waited excitedly.

"Ready... set... go!" Donald took off like a rocket — or at least, that was how it felt in his mind. The others surged ahead, their feet slapping the track rhythmically. Arms flailing and legs wobbling like spaghetti, Donald stumbled along. The crowd at the edge of the track was a blur of colours and noise. He kept going, puffing like a tired train.

When Donald was at the halfway mark, the other runners had already started on the second lap. A wave of whispers rippled through the crowd. Donald's classmates began to snigger. Someone shouted, "Come on, slowpoke!" He heard the taunting words. Every word pricked his heart like a needle.

Donald winced but he kept running. His shirt clung to his back, his throat burned, and still, he ran. The teacher clicked her stopwatch as Donald crossed the finish line. She nodded briefly and wrote something on her clipboard. There was not a single sound, only silence lingered in the air.

Breathing heavily, he made his way slowly to the side of the track. The other students were already at the water point, joking around. Donald did not join the merrymaking. His face was red but he smiled. "Why didn't you stop?" one girl asked, genuinely perplexed. "You were so far behind!" Donald shrugged and muttered, "Because I hadn't finished yet." The girl stared, not understanding. He stood tall. He had finished the race — against the odds, despite the teasing. That was enough.

Donald stood a few metres away, watching silently as the others celebrated. Even when a few classmates motioned him forward, he gave a small smile but stayed where he was. It was enough for him to observe from a distance. His classmates were crowding around the winner. Some gave him high fives as he raised both arms in victory. Laughter and shouts of praise filled the air. However, Donald stood aside, away from the crowd.

Later that afternoon, as Donald was on his way out, a boy from his class jogged up beside him. "Hey," he said, "you didn't give up." Donald looked up and blinked in surprise. "I think that's kind of amazing." He grinned widely and gave Donald a pat on his back before jogging off. Donald felt his heart race, not from running. Those words stayed with him. Never in his wildest imagination did he think he would be recognised by anyone — especially not for finishing last. A smile spread across his face as he kept walking, the warmth lingering like sunshine after rain. In that moment, Donald understood what success truly meant. To him, success was never just about winning. Maybe it never would be.

Hi Harun,

How are you doing? I just got back from a trip to visit my grandparents in
(36) [ ]
Malaysia so it was truly unforgettable! I want to tell you more about it!
(37) [ ] (38) [ ]
My grandparents live in a tranqueal town near Ipoh. My grandfather, to who I really look up, told me many funny stories about his growing years. He even (39) [ ]
taught me an old folk song that he had sing when he was a boy. I was really surprised that he could sing so well!
(40) [ ]
We also went for a hike in the forest. I nearly slipped and fell of a wet rock
(41) [ ]
but we both ended up laughing histerikali. We even spotted a snake that was
(42) [ ]
camoflaqued beneath the leaves!
(43) [ ]
Even though I got bitten by moskittos, I didn't mind at all. Spending time
(44) [ ]
with my grandparents reminded me of the important of family.
(45) [ ]
I'm sure you'll be happy to know that I bought you a small suvenier, too!

I can't wait to see you back in school! See you soon!
