Jake and Lily loved exploring the forest near their grandparents' house. One morning, they followed a remote (16) trail they had never taken before. Leaves crunched under their feet as they ventured (17) deeper into the woods.

Suddenly, Lily stopped. "Jake, look!" she whispered.

They saw enormous footprints leading off the path.

"Maybe it's a bear," Jake said.

Lily frowned. "But bears don't wear shoes, do they?"

The footprints were long and narrow, with peculiar (18) markings on the sides. Curious, Jake suggested following them. The footprints led them to an old hut. A deep growl came from inside. Frightened, the children turned and bolted (19) home. Breathless, they told their grandfather what they had seen. Their grandfather chortled (20). "You found Old Henry's cabin! He made special wooden shoes for loggers."

Jake and Lily exchanged glances – the truth was even more fascinating than their imagination.

Refer to the passage below when you answer questions 26 to 30 in Booklet B.

Ray and Grandpa Halfmoon walked down the pavement. Ray danced rhythmically, his handmade beaded bag flapping merrily at his hip.

"Let's stop in here," Grandpa said, stepping into Murphy's Antique Shop. Inside, the shop brimmed with treasures: an autographed baseball, a Chinese lantern, a basket of antique buttons, and a moose head mounted high on the wall. Grandpa pointed to a pair of leather shoes in a glass box. The card read: Authentic Indian Leather Shoes, $50 Or Best Offer.

"These remind me of home," Grandpa said softly.

Ray glanced at them but was more excited about watching the baseball match. "We'd better go," Grandpa said. "The game is starting." At the stadium, they watched their favourite team play against their archrival. After the game, they got hot dogs. Grandpa told stories about his childhood as they ate.

"Chicago hot dogs are good," Grandpa said, "but I miss the fried bacon from back home." Ray realised Grandpa was homesick.

That night, Ray emptied his savings – twenty-eight dollars. Was it enough? $50 or Best Offer. Maybe he had a chance. He kept his money safely in his beaded bag.

After school on Monday, Ray hurried back to Murphy's Antique Shop. A woman was already eyeing the leather shoes. "I need traditional items for a cultural exhibition. Are they really Native American worn and made?" she asked. "I could check," Murphy said, "but it might take a while." "I don't have time," she replied. "I can only offer thirty dollars."

Ray's heart sank. Thirty dollars? That was more than what he had. Just then, the wind slammed the door. The Chinese lantern spun, and the autographed baseball tumbled into a basket of buttons. The buttons scattered everywhere! Ray saw his chance.

"I'll give twenty-eight dollars," he told Murphy as he pulled out the money from his bag. "I'll pick up every last button too."

"Sorry, Ray," Murphy said. "This shop needs the money."

The lady hesitated, glancing apologetically at Ray. Taking a deep breath, she set her books down and paid for the leather shoes. Upon seeing that, Ray defeatedly stuffed his money back into his beaded bag. Suddenly, Ray had an idea.

"Want to trade?" he asked. "I have a traditional beaded bag. It is handmade."

The lady glanced at Ray's bag and chuckled. She agreed. Murphy watched as they left the shop contentedly, each having what they wanted.

That night, Grandpa slid his feet into the leather shoes. His eyes watered.
