Text 2

The extract below is taken from an article about smartphones.

Every year, new smartphones are released with promises of the latest features and better performance. Advertisements say that upgrading to new models will significantly improve user experience, causing consumers to chase new phone models. However, in many cases, the actual difference between old and new models is minor, while the price increase is substantial. It is worth considering whether the improvements in new models are indeed value for money.

A common marketing strategy is to emphasise the improved functions in new models, such as higher processing speeds and camera megapixels. Longer battery life is another frequently advertised feature. New models may have significantly larger batteries. However, as battery performance gradually decreases over time, a simple battery change may be considerably cheaper than purchasing expensive new models.

, 2, 3 or 4) on the Optical Answer Sheet. (5 marks)

21 According to the poster in Text 1, which of the following is true?

(1) The Sunburst has at least two key features.
(2) Customers can purchase the Sunburst online.
(3) The Sunburst is the first smartphone produced in 2025.
(4) Customers will receive a pair of air tickets after purchasing the Sunburst.

22 The writer made the statement, "The Future in Your Hands", in Text 1 to emphasise that the phone _____.

(1) helps you control the future
(2) will set the trend for other phones
(3) is guaranteed to improve the future
(4) is better than current phone models

23 Based on the poster in Text 1, which of the following best fits the phone you expect to purchase?

(1) complicated
(2) expensive
(3) superior
(4) bulky

24 "Take shots like a professional!" The picture supports this by giving the impression that the camera _____.

(1) takes high-quality photographs
(2) improves facial features of people
(3) is suitable for professional photographers
(4) makes the photographer look like an expert

25 We cannot trust the way Text 1 promotes Nova's new model, the Sunburst, because Text 2 says _____.

(1) new models may have significantly larger batteries
(2) upgrading to new models will significantly improve user experience
(3) a common marketing strategy is to emphasise better features in new models
(4) it is worth considering whether the improvements in new models are indeed value for money

Downloaded from SingaKids.com

Refer to the passage below when you answer questions 66 to 75 in Booklet B.

Shadows stretched long into the void deck as Rose approached with hesitant steps. In just an hour, she and her family would leave the familiar behind, moving into a new neighbourhood and a life unknown. Lily, her bosom buddy, was waiting on the marble bench. Over the years, this had become their favourite haunt, their refuge and their place for sharing whispered secrets. Without a word, Rose sank down beside her. The dread of having to part ways soon weighed heavily on their hearts.

Just beyond the bench was where Rose had first learnt to ride a bicycle when she was six. She could recall the soreness in her thighs as she pedalled, her father's steady voice urging her on and the sting of scraped knees after every fall. On a pivotal try, her father had held the back of her seat and promised not to let go. However, he lied. It was the only way Rose could discover her own balance. When she finally did, it opened the door to a new joy – weekend rides with Lily. Together, they laughed, raced and zigzagged between the pillars of the shared space like seasoned riders in their own private arena.

Moments later, Rose and Lily walked on slowly. Near the lift lobby, Rose paused. "Do you remember ... when we came here for your grandmother's funeral?" she asked softly. Lily nodded, "I was nine. You were the first to arrive. Your mum brought curry puffs for my family and your dad assisted in arranging the chairs." The evening had been quiet, except for the sound of muffled weeping from time to time. Many were laden with sadness. Yet, there were also moments of laughter, stories and a celebration of the blessed life Lily's grandmother had lived. Rose did not say much that day, but her presence had been Lily's anchor of support in a sea of grief.

When they reached the area near the mailboxes, Rose and Lily smiled as they remembered a wedding from when they were eleven. Their neighbours, Ahmad and Nora, had tied the knot. That day, the void deck came alive with music and the smell of spicy, savoury dishes drifted all around them. Dressed in bright colours, the girls had danced ecstatically. With every twirl, joy bubbled up inside them. Best of all, the girls tasted every delectable dish twice. These memories from the wedding were a snapshot of childhood happiness that was ingrained in their minds.

As they passed the noticeboard, a recent memory surfaced. Just a month ago, Rose and Lily had volunteered at the neighbourhood food donation drive that had been held at that very space. For hours, they had gathered and sorted a variety of food items donated by friendly residents. Although the tasks were laborious, the sense of purpose – how the food collected would eventually bless the less fortunate – had kept the girls going. Thinking about the difference they had made in the lives of the underprivileged, the girls beamed with pride.

"Rose, it's time to go," her mother called out gently. Hearing that, Lily took out a small sketchbook and handed it to Rose. Inside were drawings of the cherished moments they had shared – Rose's first bicycle, the kind face of Lily's grandmother, the wedding day feast and the donation booth. In the middle of the page was a drawing of a big red heart, a symbol of love the girls had for their shared memories. Touched by the meaningful gift, Rose teared. For Rose, the void deck was not just a space under their flats, but a place filled with laughter, friendship and memories from her childhood. She firmly believed that surroundings might change, but relationships would always remain. "Bye, Lily. I'll surely be back to visit," Rose promised.

Unpacking the Topic

(i) Problem must be clearly defined
- 'Problem' can be defined as a difficult, challenging or complex issue / situation.

(ii) Process of solving the problem / Steps taken to solve the problem must be clearly represented and developed in the story.

Note: The story must focus on a clearly defined problem and the steps taken to solve the problem. If a story has a lengthy pre-amble and the focus on solving the problem is minimal, then the entire relevance of the content will be affected. Also, if the problem is not clearly defined in your story, the relevance of the solution will be affected.

Unpacking the Pictures

Picture 1: A Watch / Concept of Time

- a lost watch
- a broken watch
- a stolen watch
- a lack of punctuality / time management
- a race against time to solve a problem

Picture 2: A Disagreement / Misunderstanding / An Argument between two or more people (between / among family or friends)

- Stories must revolve around a disagreement; conflict; misunderstanding; argument between two or more people, and the steps taken to solve the issue.

Picture 3: Dirty table / Not clearing own mess after having a meal at home / in school / in public e.g. hawker centre / food court / coffee shop etc.

Note: Focus must be on the cleanliness of a dining place / eatery

- Dirty canteen due to irresponsible students – steps taken to solve this problem
- Being caught not clearing your own mess after a meal and how the issue was resolved thereafter
- Empathy for elderly cleaner in a dirty eatery – volunteered to help clear the mess (steps taken to solve this problem)

Dear Mr Ong, I am writing to ask if you would consider taking the class to watch a play that is adapted from the popular children's book that we have read as a class, 'The Secret of Lovely Forest', at the Arts College Auditorium. The dates of the performance are from 24 to 28 November[2] and each performance will be staged from 10am to 12pm.	including purposeful additional details
I am really keen on watching the play as I have difficulty following the story when reading the book and watching it may help me gain a better understanding of the story[1]. My classmates will definitely welcome this idea as we can do something interesting together during the school holidays[5] and strengthen our bond as a class. The organiser of the play has attractive offers especially for schools. We will receive a 20% discount with a purchase of at least thirty tickets[3]. Each ticket also comes with a complimentary learning pack[4], which will benefit us when we watch the play. If you decide to take us to the play, please email schoolbookings@sct.sg with the preferred date and the number of tickets required[6].	using persuasive tone
Please consider my suggestion and take our class to watch this play that we will certainly enjoy. Thank you. Yours sincerely, Rosie Low	reinforcing purpose in conclusion
