We often feel annoyed by the inconsiderate behaviour of others in public places. Hence, we should practise good etiquette (16). For example, when speaking in public places, we should keep our voices low, but loud enough (17) for our target audience only. This is especially important when we are in enclosed (18) spaces like on board a bus, in a cinema, library or museum. We also need to be aware (19) not to draw attention to ourselves by behaving inappropriately (20). We should not laugh loudly, play or run in busy places like shopping malls and supermarkets. Being considerate and respectful towards others will make shared spaces and experiences pleasant for everyone.

Downloaded from SingaKids.com

Text 2

The extract below is taken from an online article on shampoos.

Unlike how they are advertised, most shampoos in the market are similar in composition and function. They share common key ingredients such as water, detergents, conditioners and preservatives. While manufacturers boast real benefits and unmatched effectiveness, a closer look at the ingredient lists reveals striking similarities.

The differences between brands often lie in slight variations in the ingredients or the amount of each ingredient used. However, the differences between products of the same brand often lie in the fragrances and dyes used or the marketing claims made rather than variations in their basic components. Thus, the remarkable effects splashed across their packaging are often misleading. The truth is, we do not need to be picky when selecting shampoos unless a dermatologist recommends one to deal with specific hair and scalp issues.

For each question from 21 to 25, choose the best answer. Shade your answer (1, 2, 3 or 4) in the Optical Answer Sheet.

(5 marks)

21. According to the poster in Text 1, which of the following is true of the shampoo collection?

(1) The shampoo collection is sold in sets of three.
(2) Each bottle of shampoo in the collection costs $25.
(3) The name of the shampoo collection is Purelocks Pro.
(4) Each shampoo in the collection has a different floral fragrance.

22. "Embrace your transformation." The writer made this statement in Text 1 to _____.

(1) encourage readers to accept their changes
(2) motivate readers to try the shampoo collection
(3) offer readers advice about choosing shampoos
(4) inform readers about the shampoo collection's aim

23. The quote from Steph Lim is included in the poster in Text 1 to show that the shampoo collection _____.

(1) was disappointing
(2) made her hair healthy
(3) is used by many TV personalities
(4) will be available for a limited period

24. "Three unique formulas to offer maximum benefits!" The picture of the shampoo collection supports this by giving the impression that the shampoos _____.

(1) suit different people
(2) serve different purposes
(3) are sold at different prices
(4) contain different ingredients

25. We cannot be sure that the shampoo collection in Text 1 is worth purchasing over other brands because Text 2 says _____.

(1) the benefits printed on the packaging are often real
(2) most shampoos in the market contain similar key ingredients
(3) manufacturers lie about the fragrances and dyes used in shampoos
(4) a dermatologist will be able to recommend a suitable shampoo easily

Read the passage below when you answer questions 66 to 75 in Booklet B.

It was a Monday morning. Father was helping Danny pack his bag for a holiday camp the next day. "Do I really have to go, Father?" Danny asked, stomping his feet. "Son, sometimes the best lessons in life are learnt at camps," Father encouraged. "But I never have the right words to say when talking to someone new," Danny grunted. "Alright, let's make a deal. If you learn something good at this camp, then this shall be the last holiday camp I sign you up for," Father promised. "Deal," Danny replied, frowning as he recalled the uncomfortable conversations he had had with his camp mates the previous year.

The first day at camp flew by with the flurry of activity. Right after dinner, everyone was busy packing their bags in their rooms in preparation for the night walk. That was something Danny looked forward to, especially since he had never gone on one before. Fumbling for coins in his pocket, Danny headed to the canteen to get a bottle of iced tea from the vending machine. "Ah! The perfect companion for the night walk!" he exclaimed as he took a few sips and exhaled. Just as Danny was about to secure the bottle cap, he heard footsteps. He was caught off-guard as someone suddenly brushed past him and hit his elbow. The bottle slipped out of his hands and fell to the floor. Light brown liquid gushed out, creating ugly puddles on the floor. Danny caught a glimpse of a boy in a green T-shirt running off into the distance. "How rude!" Danny shouted, gritting his teeth. "Not even an apology!"

Just then, Mr Halim, the camp guide, approached Danny. "What are you doing here inste- " he asked but stopped midway when he saw the mess on the floor. "It wasn't me!" Danny raised his voice in his defence. "I'm sure there's an explanation for this, but there's no reason to use that tone with me," Mr Halim replied as he glared at Danny. "You'll fix this mess you created before we head out for the night walk," he remarked and walked off in a hurry before Danny could explain himself.

"How unfortunate," Danny sulked. "It wasn't even my fault to begin with." Getting down on his knees, he started wiping up the mess. In the silence of the night, all he could hear was the chirping of crickets in the distance. Twenty minutes had passed. Danny managed to calm himself down and think clearly. He recalled how Mother had given him a second chance when he broke her vase by mistake a week ago. Realising that what had happened just now might have been an accident, Danny resolved to let bygones be bygones.

Soon, the floor was dry and Danny's work was done. As he got up to leave, he heard a strange sound. It seemed to be coming from behind a pillar. What could it be, Danny thought as he scratched his head. Everyone had left for the night walk. "A lizard? A cricket?" he mused as he inched forward, craning his neck to see what was behind the pillar. From a distance, he spotted something green sticking out of the pillar. He stopped dead in his tracks when he came face to face with the boy he had seen earlier.

"You... you..." Danny started. "Please don't yell at me," the boy begged. "Let me explain. I'm Siva. I felt bad for causing the spill earlier when I ran to get my torch for the night walk. I knew I had to make up for what I had done earlier. That is why I've been here all this while, trying to find the courage to say sorry," he said meekly.

"Well, I was upset at first," Danny admitted. "But not anymore. I figured you might not have done it on purpose," he added. Just then, the boys heard a familiar voice. "I'm glad you've cleaned up the mess. Now, we can all head out for the night walk," Mr Halim remarked with a smile. Nodding his head, Danny replied, "I'm sorry about the incident earlier, Mr Halim."

The next day, Father went to the campsite to fetch Danny when the camp ended. He was pleasantly surprised to see Danny chatting animatedly with another boy. On the drive home, Danny could not stop talking about his new friend, Siva. "I had a good time, Father, and I learnt a valuable lesson about second chances!" Danny chirped. "So, would you be keen to attend another camp the next holiday?" Father asked. Looking at Father, Danny smiled and nodded.
