WE GIVE OLD TENNIS BALLS A NEW LIFE!

A MOVEMENT STARTED BY A 10-YEAR-OLD!

Inspired to combine his passions in tennis and helping others, Liam Tan started ReBounce to upcycle used tennis balls into products that can be sold.

Did you know that 300 million tennis balls are thrown away each year?

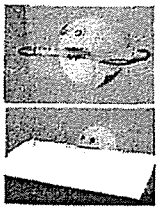

How You Can Help:

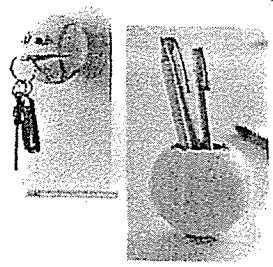

Donate your old tennis balls

Help us collect and distribute used balls for upcycling projects

Get involved in creating upcycled products for sale

All proceeds collected will go to charitable organisations.

Text 2:

The transcript below is an extract of an interview with James, a volunteer with Project HomeWorks, a non-profit organisation that helps clean and tidy up cluttered homes.

Interviewer:	Hi, James. Please share with us how you got involved in Project HomeWorks.
James:	It started back in secondary school when I volunteered with like-minded friends. The experience really opened my eyes to show me that there are actually people in Singapore who genuinely need help in decluttering their homes, and that youths like us can truly make a difference. Through it all, I learnt many practical skills, including basic housekeeping!
Interviewer:	Wow, that's impressive! Was there anything that surprised you while volunteering?
James:	I didn't realise so many people like to hoard unnecessary items. When there's no more space in the house, they continue piling up their belongings along the corridors. These end up not only being an eyesore but also pose as a fire hazard.
Interviewer:	What drives you to continue volunteering?
James:	Revamping a home — seeing it go from dirty and cluttered to something fresh and liveable — is incredibly fulfilling. It's not just about the walls or furniture. It's about the dignity, safety, and sometimes even mental well-being of the tenants. Working together, we get things done more quickly. When we repaint walls or bring in clean furniture, the homeowners' spirits lift. For us volunteers, it's a reminder that simple acts of service can have a significant impact.

21 According to the poster in Text 1, which of the following is not true?

(1) A huge number of tennis balls are discarded every year.
(2) ReBounce was started by an environmentally-conscious 10-year-old.
(3) It encourages readers to use fewer tennis balls so that there will be less wastage.
(4) Readers can be involved in DIY projects by ReBounce to give new life to old tennis balls.

22 "Did you know that 300 million tennis balls are thrown away each year?" Why did the writer ask the question in Text 1?

(1) to evaluate the environmental impact of throwing tennis balls
(2) to get readers to reflect on what happens to used tennis balls
(3) to attract the attention of tennis coaches, players and sports organisations
(4) to make sure readers remember the number of tennis balls thrown away yearly

23 "Give old tennis balls a new life!"
The images in Text 1 support this sentence by showing that the products made with old te balls are _____.

(1) cost-saving
(2) frivolous
(3) inspired
(4) useful

24 According to Text 2, which of the following does not explain why James finds volunteering with Project HomeWorks fulfilling?

(1) it enhances the mental well-being of tenants
(2) it boosts the dignity of the residents
(3) it teaches him many practical skills
(4) it enhances the safety of the home

25 Text 2 supports Text 1 about the significant impact of small actions because it states that _____.

(1) youths can truly make a difference
(2) revamping a home is incredibly fulfilling
(3) simple acts of service can have a big impact
(4) working together, we get things done more quickly

It was a breezy Saturday afternoon, perfect for flying kites. Amir and Ben, best friends from

(37) ☐

they were five, had built a giant red kite together. At first, the boys were pride of how magnificent their kite looked. However, just as they reached the field, they had an arguement over who should fly it first.

(38) ☐

"It was my idea!" Amir shouted.

(39) ☐

"But I helped built it!" Ben snapped.

Their voices grew so loud that a group of children nearby stared at them, making Ben feel

(40) ☐

ambarased. Finally, Ben walked away, leaving Amir to fly the kite alone. As Amir watched it soar, a strong gust suddenly pulled hard at the string. This caused the kite to crash into a tree and it tore.

(41) ☐

The fun afternoon was rooinned.

(42) ☐

Later that evening, Amir sat alone, thinking. He realised friendship was with far greater importance than being right.

(43) ☐

The next day, Amir knocked on Ben's door with tape, string and an apologise. Together, they repaired the kite. As they worked, a mizchievious grin spread across Ben's face. "Next time,

(44) ☐

(45) ☐

I'm flying it first!" he joked, bursting into pils of laughter. "Not a chance!" Amir replied.
